Bark Dean Starkman, 2014-01-07 The Pulitzer Prize winning reporter details how the U S business press could miss the most important economic implosion of the past eighty years Eric Alterman media columnist for The Nation In this sweeping incisive post mortem Dean Starkman exposes the critical shortcomings that softened coverage in the business press during the mortgage era and the years leading up to the financial collapse of 2008 He examines the deep cultural and structural shifts some unavoidable some self inflicted that eroded journalism s appetite for its role as watchdog The result was a deafening silence about systemic corruption in the financial industry Tragically this silence grew only more profound as the mortgage madness reached its terrible apogee from 2004 through 2006 Starkman frames his analysis in a broad argument about journalism itself dividing the profession into two competing approaches access reporting and accountability reporting which rely on entirely different sources and produce radically different representations of reality As Starkman explains access journalism came to dominate business reporting in the 1990s a process he calls CNBCization and rather than examining risky even corrupt corporate behavior mainstream reporters focused on profiling executives and informing investors Starkman concludes with a critique of the digital news ideology and corporate influence which threaten to further undermine investigative reporting and he shows how financial coverage and journalism as a whole can reclaim its bite Can stand as a potentially enduring case study of what went wrong and why Alec Klein national bestselling author of Aftermath With detailed statistics Starkman provides keen analysis of how the media failed in its mission at a crucial time for the U S economy Booklist

Chicago's North Michigan Avenue John W. Stamper, 1991-08-27 Since its opening in the 1920s Chicago's North Michigan Avenue has been one of the city's most prestigious commercial corridors lined by some of its most architecturally distinctive business residential and hotel buildings Planned by Daniel Burnham in 1909 the avenue became the principal connecting link between downtown and the wealthy residential Gold Coast north of the Loop Some thirty buildings were constructed along its path in the ten year period before the Depression an urban expansion comparable in significance to that of Pennsylvania and Park Avenues John W Stamper traces the complex development of North Michigan Avenue from the 1880s to the 1920s building boom that solidified its character and economic base describing the initiation of the planning process by private interests to its execution aided by the city's powerful condemnation and taxation proceedings He focuses on individual buildings constructed on the avenue including the Renaissance and Gothic inspired Wrigley Building Tribune Tower and Drake Hotel and places them within the context of factors governing their construction property ownership financing zoning laws design theory and advertising Stamper compares this stylistically diverse mixture of low and high rise structures with earlier rejected planning proposals all of which had prescribed a uniformly designed European like avenue of continuous cornice heights consistent facade widths and complementary stylistic features He analyzes the drastically different character the avenue took by 1930 with high rise towers reaching thirty stories and beyond in terms of the clash among economic political and architectural interests His argument that the discrepancies between the rejected plans and reality illustrate the developers choice of economic return on their investment over aesthetic community is extended through to the present avenue and the virtual disregard of the urban qualities proposed at its inception Generously illustrated with an epilogue condensing the avenue s history between the end of World War II and the present this is an exhaustive account of an important topic in the history of modern architecture and city planning
