Renewable Energies for Central Asia Countries: Economic, Environmental and Social Impacts Aldo Iacomelli, 2006-07-02

In the last few years awareness and worries about the exhaustion of natural resources are increasing but this fact is still very much discussed about its analytical measurement and therefore not yet demonstrated However what has been demonstrated is that the 6 billion inhabitants of the Earth move every kind of goods and wares around the world at about 8 tons per capita which means about 50 billion tons per year This is the same amount as is moved yearly by natural forces such as winds eruptions earthquakes rain Since the Kyoto Protocol entered into force on 16 February 2005 an investment on rational use of energy savings and efficiency is the main premise supporting the development of new energy sources needed to meet the target of the KP and UNFCCC If energy consumption decreases renewable sources could cover a significant part of the demand of energy in particular electricity if consumption remains uselessly high because inefficient and less energy consuming acting also on final uses renewable energy would become a reality a feasible method even in these sectors With investments being equal today all in the sector of generation from fossil sources if there were parallel researches on how to reduce consumption and wastes considerably at least 35% and on power plants from renewable sources there would be also a reduction of gas emissions without any negative influence on development New technologies and new energy products will play a crucial role in the development of a market of sustainable energy products that should grow in a competitive way cost effective to stand against the challenge of change The Routledge Handbook of Energy Security Benjamin K.

Sovacool, 2010-12-16 This Handbook examines the subject of energy security its definition dimensions ways to measure and index it and the complicating factors that are often overlooked The volume identifies varying definitions and dimensions of energy security including those that prioritize security of supply and affordability alongside those that emphasize availability energy efficiency trade environmental quality and social and political stewardship It also explores the various metrics that can be used to give energy security more coherence and also to enable it to be measured including recent attempts to measure energy security progress at the national level with a special emphasis placed on countries within the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development OECD countries within Asia and industrialized countries worldwide This Handbook Broadens existing discussions of energy security that center on access to fuels including oil security and coal security Focuses not only on the supply side of energy but also the demand taking a hard look at energy services and politics along with technologies and infrastructure Investigates energy security issues such as energy poverty equity and access and development Analyzes ways to index and measure energy security progress at the national and international level This book will be of much interest to students of energy security energy policy economics environmental studies and IR Security
