

Cost-of-living Crisis Update:

Diverging Food and Energy Prices,
Diverging Policy Responsesby Salome Ecker, George Gray Molina and Eduardo Ortiz-Avarez<sup>1</sup>

The first months of 2022 witnessed an accelerated spike in the international prices of food and energy as a result of the ripple effects of the war in Ukraine. In the following months, from May to September 2022, food prices dropped while natural gas and coal prices continued to surge. At present, low- and middle-income countries are primarily facing a food crisis, whereas high-income countries are predominantly challenged by an energy crisis. Policy responses have also diverged: Subsidies account for about 40 percent of responses, while cash and in-kind transfers accrue 39 percent. There are vast inequalities and inefficiencies at play: Some 53 percent of transfers and subsidies are spent in high-income countries, whereas low-income countries account for only 1 percent of the policy response. On average, for every US$1,000 spent per month, a universal subsidy would prevent one person from falling into poverty, but this number increases to 2.7 if the same amount is spent on a targeted cash transfer scheme. The cost-of-living crisis has not ended—in fact, it is further exacerbating other crises.

The ripple effects of the war in Ukraine have significantly disrupted energy and food markets and have accelerated the spike in the international prices of key commodities—which were already on the rise in the last quarter of 2021, driven by an increasing demand during the post-pandemic recovery coupled with a relatively constrained supply. In our previous report, Addressing the cost-of-living crisis in developing countries: Poverty and vulnerability projections and policy responses, we documented the potential short-term effects of the war-induced soaring food and energy prices on household welfare. Compared with a scenario in which the war did not occur, and using the food and energy inflation levels recorded between October 2021 and April 2022, the number of people falling into extreme poverty in 2022 was projected at 5.6 million globally, and up to 7 million people when using higher poverty lines—while also worsening the living conditions of the existing poor population.<sup>2</sup> More recent estimations suggest that at least 70 million people are expected to be living in

Policy Responses to High Energy and Food Prices David Amaglobeli, Mengfei Gu, Emine Hanedar, Mr. Gee Hee Hong, Celine Thevenot, 2023-03-24 The surge in energy and food prices which was amplified by Russia's invasion of Ukraine has prompted a flurry of policy responses by countries during 2022 The aim of these policy responses was to mitigate social and economic impact of higher prices In this paper we document announcements of policy measures based on the Database of Energy and Food Price Actions DEFPA which was developed based on two rounds of survey responses of IMF country teams conducted in March April and June July of 2022 The paper also provides discussion on policy trade offs when considering appropriate policy responses both for countries with strong and weak social safety nets Key policy message is that providing targeted support to households in the form of cash transfers is the most cost effective way of alleviating the burden on vulnerable households and have to be preferred over broad based mechanisms that prevent international prices to pass through to domestic consumers

Solar Energy, Technology Policy, and Institutional Values Frank N. Laird, 2001-03-26 Energy policies that promote new technologies and energy sources are policies for the future They influence the shape of emergent technological systems and also condition our social political and economic lives Solar Energy Technology Policy and Institutional Values demonstrates the difficulties of deliberating such properties by providing a historical case study that analyses US renewable energy policy from the end of World War II through the energy crisis of the 1970s The book illuminates the ways beliefs and values come to dominate official problem frames and get entrenched in institutions In doing so it also explains why advocates of renewable energy have often faced ideological opposition and why policy makers fail to take them seriously

Analysis, 1989      EU Policy Responses to a Shifting Multilateral System Esther Barbé, Oriol Costa, Robert Kissack, 2016-09-27 This book explores how the EU as an international actor is adapting to recent transformations in the multilateral system The international identity of the European Union is built upon its support for effective multilateralism and its commitment to core norms and values Until recently there was no need to choose between these goals Emerging powers in the international system are not only demanding more power in multilateral institutions but also sometimes seeking to influence their purpose and function away from those championed by the EU This presents a dilemma for EU foreign policy framed in this edited volume as either accommodating changes in order to support multilateral institutions or entrenching the EU position in order to uphold values Using a common analytical framework the chapters include case studies on important multilateral institutions such as the United Nations Security Council the International Monetary Fund the World Trade Organization and the International Criminal Court as well as key policy areas such as energy climate change nuclear non proliferation and human rights      Energy Research Abstracts, 1982 Semiannual with semiannual and annual indexes References to all scientific and technical literature coming from DOE its laboratories energy centers and contractors Includes all works deriving from DOE other related government sponsored information and foreign nonnuclear information Arranged under 39 categories e g Biomedical sciences basic studies Biomedical sciences applied studies Health and safety and Fusion energy Entry gives bibliographical information and abstract Corporate author subject report number indexes      American Economic Policy in the 1990s Jeffrey A. Smith, Harry M. Trebing, 2012-12-06 David B Smith This is a book about the application of economic theory to a unique form of social control public utility regulation A central theme of this work is to examine the role that economics has played in shaping the rationale and direction of regulatory practices While economic theory has played an important role in the shaping of regulatory policy in the past it has an even greater potential role to play in the future as the regulatory community grapples with the many challenges of a changing economic environment This is a very timely and much needed piece of work that can serve as a reference for decision makers who are facing the challenging problems of deregulation and competition This work is comprised of 13 selected articles that guide the reader from an initial discussion of why we decided to regulate certain industries in the first place to a specific analysis of what role economic theory has played in the electric natural gas telecommunications and water industries and whether it should be allowed to play an even more dominant role in the future The reader is then provided with a more modern version of what economists mean by the concept of natural monopoly and a menu of policy options that will allow society to derive any benefits from such a market structure      Where Business Fails James M. Gillies, 1981 From the back cover The relationship between business and government which has characterized Canadian economic development for more than a century is changing raising issues for business executives and government officials which they have never had to answer before Why has the tension increased between business and government Why has the government become more interventionist Why are the traditional techniques that business executives have used in dealing with government no longer working How should a corporation now organize its public affairs operations for maximum effectiveness What is the future of the corporation in Canada This study based on the views of leading Canadian business executives trade association officials former federal Cabinet ministers and leading commentators on public policy making in Ottawa answer these and similar questions

Targeting High-growth Industry Roy Edwin George, 1983 From the back cover The question of an industrial strategy for Canada has had a prominent place in Canadian debate for many years Most recently there have been several advocates for adoption in Canada of a strategy of picking winners This means identifying and providing government support to industries with a high growth potential As a corollary it means not providing support to industries deemed to be non winners Professor George has approached the question by undertaking an examination of Canadian experience to date along with an examination of the experiences several other countries have had with a strategy of targetting high growth industries He brings to light information Canadian policy makers should take into account if they contemplate adopting such a strategy for Canada

Instead of FIRA Samuel Wex, 1984 From the back cover A president of a foreign controlled subsidiary recently commented As the Canadian subsidiary of a multi national we do not necessarily always operate to do the best we can for our local books We are attempting to optimize the parent company s books How can this perspective be changed so that the Canadian subsidiary can gain a heightened sense of its independence as a profit centre without a change occurring in ownership or formal control relationships Canadian public policy contends Samuel Wex should seek to encourage maximization of the subsidiary s profits by focusing on its productivity and its international competitiveness Its performance should stamp it as a good corporate citizen In order to bring about this change of perspective different approaches will be needed to create autonomous subsidiaries that are entrepreneurial and outward looking These approaches if adopted could lead to an open door policy to new foreign investment that would be entrepreneurial and innovative

France International Monetary, International Monetary Fund. European Dept., 2023-01-30 France saw a robust recovery from the Covid 19 shock but is now facing the repercussions of Russia s war in Ukraine In 2021 output rebounded by 6.8 percent and recovered to pre crisis levels The recovery was broad based and faster than in most other European countries While France is less directly exposed to the energy shock the war in Ukraine is dampening the recovery by denting confidence and exacerbating supply side difficulties Inflation has surged but remains well below peers thanks to energy price controls and subsidies These and other measures to support purchasing power keep the fiscal deficit elevated despite the unwinding of Covid 19 support While capacity utilization remains below pre crisis levels labor market conditions have further tightened Forum for Applied Research and Public Policy ,1998 Connecting Ideas, Cultures, and Communities Clive Barstow,Holger Briel,2025-03-03 The proceedings of the Second International Symposium on Humanities and Social Sciences ISHSS 2024 provide a rich repository of scholarly articles that explore the intricate links between ideas cultures and communities This volume captures the essence of interdisciplinary research offering fresh perspectives on the challenges and opportunities within the social sciences Spanning a wide array of topics from historical analysis to contemporary sociological studies the proceedings delve into the main findings of the symposium With a focus on regional development political policies and the impact of technology on education these papers illustrate a commitment to advancing understanding and fostering global dialogue Designed for academics researchers and professionals in the fields of humanities and social sciences this publication is ideal for those seeking to expand their knowledge engage with current research and contribute to the ongoing discourse on the pressing issues of our time Renewables Michael Aklin,Johannes Urpelainen,2018-03-23 A comprehensive political analysis of the rapid growth in renewable wind and solar power mapping an energy transition through theory case studies and policy Wind and solar are the most dynamic components of the global power sector How did this happen After the 1973 oil crisis the limitations of an energy system based on fossil fuels created an urgent need to experiment with alternatives and some pioneering governments reaped political gains by investing heavily in alternative energy such as wind or solar power Public policy enabled growth over time and economies of scale brought down costs dramatically In this book Michael Aklin and Johannes Urpelainen offer a comprehensive political analysis of the rapid growth in renewable wind and solar power mapping an energy transition through theory case studies and policy analysis Aklin and Urpelainen argue that because the fossil fuel energy system and political support for it are so entrenched only an external shock an abrupt rise in oil prices or a nuclear power accident for example allows renewable energy to grow They analyze the key factors that enable renewable energy to withstand political backlash and they draw on this analysis to explain and predict the development of renewable energy in different countries over time They examine the pioneering efforts in the United States Germany and Denmark after the 1973 oil crisis and other shocks explain why the United States surrendered its leadership role in renewable energy and trace the recent rapid growth of modern renewables in electricity generation describing among other things the return of wind and solar to the United States Finally they apply the lessons of their analysis to contemporary energy policy issues Getting Ready for 1999 Tom Kent,1989 Topics discussed in this paper include the primacy of political parties reforming the political process true representation a fuller economy reviving the market better taxation preventing poverty scope and space for people and
