

choice of words at several places in his introduction, which might sound condescending toward Buddhists. It is unfortunate that Gombrich, following Spiro, has left the general reader with an impression that "the institution of Buddhist monachism answers to certain regressive character traits; that it can serve as a charter for narcissism . . ." without elaborating the point more thoroughly. He notes this line of interpretation as "a bold suggestion put forward by Professor Spiro. . ." (p. xxvi). This might lead a reader to conclude (because there is no further elaboration) that the subtle and comprehensive notions of "going forth" (pabbajjā) and "going against the stream" (i.e., current norms of convenience, paṭisotagāmin) primarily "answer to certain regressive character traits."

Gombrich's second part of the introduction is helpful to a scholar and his third part, though brief, is fine, particularly because it draws attention to Sinhala Buddhist art and might lead others to pursue this subject further. The textual tradition is there, both Pali and Sinhala, and the art is there, although rapidly deteriorating. We need more authors with Gombrich's talent and knowledge of Sri Lanka to try to duplicate the high standards of this book for other texts and stories.

Margaret Cone's judgment of the English verse translation by W. H. D. Rouse written seventy years ago (p. v) seems unnecessarily harsh, but her translation of the Vessantara Jātaka is quite good. The light raillery of the old brahmin Jūjaka by his wife, Amittatāpanā, is delightfully translated, keeping both the pace and satire of the Pali text (pp. 41–43). There are several other splendid examples of a job well done.

Translating a story with such ramifications into dimensions of the human drama as the Vessantara Jātaka is not an easy task. It is a noteworthy accomplishment to engage a reader who does not know Pali with the multiple layers of interpretation, and to reveal the relevance to such a reader of the complex facets of human experience embedded in a famous story. Cone has done this. To provide a context that places a story in its religious milieu and worldview in both the past and more recent times, through scholarly research and photographic illustrations, is a demanding and time consuming process. Gombrich has done this. The authors' collaboration has been most fruitful.

Hawkers in Southeast Asian Cities: Planning for the Bazaar Economy. By T. G. MCGEE and Y. M. YEUNG. Ottawa: International Development Research Centre, 1977. 138 pp. Bibliography, Appendix. $7.50.

This short, deceptively simple book is a welcome and substantial contribution to the little understood nature of the structure of urban societies not only in Southeast Asia but in much of the developing world. It brings together the results of a two-year study begun in 1973 under the auspices of the Social Sciences and Human Resource Division of the International Development Research Center of Canada. The study deals with street traders and petty merchants in Jakarta and Bandung in Indonesia; Kuala Lumpur and Malacca in Malaysia; and Manila and Bagio in the Philippines. The authors compare their information with that of other works in the field, especially the material on Singapore and Hong Kong. The book is specifically designed to be of practical use to national and local planners and administrators who

Hawkers in Southeast Asian Cities T. G. McGee, Yue-man Yeung, 1977 Comparison of informal sector activity of street vendors in urban areas of South East Asia covers economic implications and social implications of street hawking legal aspects demographic aspects etc and includes recommendations for government policy Bibliography pp 119 to 129 diagrams graphs illustrations questionnaire and statistical tables

Critical Reflections on Cities in Southeast Asia Tim Bunnell, Lisa Drummond, Ho, 2021-11-15 Critical Reflections draws together the multi disciplinary research of scholars working in on cities across Southeast Asia The fourteen essays collected in the volume are organised into three thematic sections re conceptualisation competition and intervention Collectively these reflections contribute to and interrogate the expanding urban and regional studies literature The volume constitutes a critical corrective to the existing literature which all too often seeks to diagnose contemporary urban trends everywhere from a small number of mostly Western paradigmatic cases Yet while acknowledging the increasing interconnectedness and shared global orientation of most cities in Southeast Asia the volume is wary of positing an equally generalising regional model Individually these essays attend to the diversity of contemporary urban experiences in Southeast Asia

Street Vendors in the Global Urban Economy Sharit Bhowmik, 2012-04-27 This volume looks at the living and working conditions of street vendors in different cities of the world It examines the legal guidelines regarding control of public space and the rights of the working poor to earn their livelihood and the civic authorities constant regulation of this space

The Changing Middle Eastern City G.H. Blake, R.I. Lawless, 2016-03-22 The Middle East defined here as extending from Morocco to Iran and Turkey to Sudan lies at the crossroads of three continents Africa Asia and Europe With the largest reserves of petroleum in the world its importance is well beyond its physical size and population Rapid urban growth has radically transformed Middle Eastern society in recent decades but the associated problems are incompletely understood This volume first published in 1980 highlights some of the major issues of Middle Eastern urbanisation and provides a comprehensive statement about the current position of research Urban origins and the nature of urban growth are discussed to provide a background to considerations of migration employment housing and retailing The contributors suggest that planning strategies have hitherto proved inadequate with small towns being largely overlooked historic quarters rapidly disappearing and water in short supply Future research into all these problem areas is considered essential but the research must be coordinated and utilised Concentrating on practical problems achievements and challenges for research the contributions in this book specially commissioned from active researchers in the field will prove a valuable guide to recent ideas and developments in the Middle East
