HONORABLE MENTION 2022 Gloria E Anzald a Book Prize given by the National Women s Studies Association Reveals the troubling intimacy between Black women and the making of US global power The year 1968 marked both the height of the worldwide Black liberation struggle and a turning point for the global reach of American power which was built on the counterinsurgency honed on Black and other oppressed populations at home The next five decades saw the consolidation of the culture of the American empire through what Erica R Edwards calls the imperial grammars of blackness This is a story of state power at its most devious and most absurd and at the same time a literary history of Black feminist radicalism at its most trenchant Edwards reveals how the long war on terror beginning with the late Cold War campaign against organizations like the Black Panther Party for Self Defense and the Black Liberation Army has relied on the labor and the fantasies of Black women to justify the imperial spread of capitalism Black feminist writers not only understood that this would demand a shift in racial gendered power but crafted ways of surviving it The Other Side of Terror offers an interdisciplinary Black feminist analysis of militarism security policing diversity representation intersectionality and resistance while discussing a wide array of literary and cultural texts from the unpublished work of Black radical feminist June Jordan to the memoirs of Condoleezza Rice to the television series Scandal With clear moving prose Edwards chronicles Black feminist organizing and writing on the other side of terror which tracked changes in racial power transformed African American literature and Black studies and predicted the crises of our current era with unsettling accuracy Works John Tillotson,1717 United States Code United States,1941 Falsifying Beckett Matthew Feldman,2014-04-01 The dozen essays brought together here alongside a newly written introduction contextualize and exemplify the recent empirical turn in Beckett studies Characterized above all by recourse to manuscript materials in constructing revisionist interpretations this approach has helped to transform the study of Samuel Beckett over the past generation In addition to focusing upon Beckett s early immersion in philosophy and psychology other chapters similarly analyze his later collaboration with the BBC through the lens of literary history Falsifying Beckett thus offers new readings of Beckett by returning to his archive of notebooks letters and drafts In reassessing key aspects of his development as one of the 20th century s leading artists this collection is of interest to all students of Beckett s writing as well as historicist scholars and critics of modernism more generally Hearings United States. The Subject's Point of View Katalin Farkas,2010-08-19 Descartes's philosophy has had a considerable influence on the modern conception of the mind but many think that this influence has been largely negative The main project of The Subject's Point of View is to argue that discarding certain elements of the Cartesian conception would be much more difficult than critics seem to allow since it is tied to our understanding of basic notions including the criteria for what makes someone a person or one of us The crucial feature of the Cartesian view defended here is not dualism which is not adopted but internalism Internalism is opposed to the widely accepted externalist thesis which states that some mental features constitutively depend on certain features of our physical and social environment In contrast this book defends the minority internalist view which holds that the mind is autonomous and though it is obviously affected by the environment this influence is merely contingent and does not delimit what is thinkable in principle Defenders of the externalist view often present their theory as the most thoroughgoing criticism of the Cartesian conception of the mind Katalin Farkas offers a defence of an uncompromising internalist Cartesian conception
