Straw,1932      God's Answers to Man's Questions Alban Douglas,1976      Black Giles the Poacher & Tawny Rachel the Fortune-Teller Hannah More,2016-09-14 Black Giles taught his children many cunning schemes to beg and steal He is against education and promotes laziness and bad behavior as a way of life When they came across widow Brown s apple tree their actions had surprising consequences Tawny Rachel his wife wormed her way into farmer s homes and then offered to tell fortunes which she used to cheat them out of their money Rachel tricked a woman by promising a husband but Rachel s own fortune was soon to be known Original title Black Giles the Poacher Containing Some Account of a Family Who Had Rather Live by Their Wits Than Their Work Part 2 History of Widow Brown s Apple Tree Original title Tawny Rachel The Fortune Teller with Some Account of Dreams Omens and Conjurers      Humphrey

Grainger's Losses Hesba Stretton,2015-02-06 Victoria was fresh from a last minute wedding when her husband died during a sea voyage She had nowhere to go but to finish the journey to his home But at home she found that great emotions were bound up in the legal directives of his father s will The story is about not being angry with providence but only decide upon what is right and leave the rest to God

The Concept of Correlation John P. Clayton, 2011-12-22 No detailed description available for The Concept of Correlation

The Fabric of Paul Tillich's Theology David H. Kelsey, 2011-07-22 By taking seriously Tillich's claim to be a confessional Church theologian rather than a metaphysician with religious interests this carefully ordered study gains a fresh perspective on the structure of argument upon which his theological enterprise rests Scriptural material is shown to control his judgments in much the same way that literature controls those of the literary critic a particularly illuminating comparison in view of his argument that the verbal icon provided by the biblical picture of Jesus as the Christ bears analogia imaginis to the historical Jesus and hence provides the sole access to the original Christian revelation Tillich's movement from symbols as data to theological judgments as conclusions is seen to be warranted not by his ontology but by his presentation of the phenomenology of revelatory events Though historical study of Jesus and of the Bible is in principle irrelevant to this use of scripture his confusions in this area are examined and the structural flaws in his accounts of the biblical picture of Jesus are shown to yield a Christian theology in which Christology is oddly dispensable Finally his discussion of God is used as a test case for the analysis of the general structure of his argument and the various sorts of conclusions that he feels Scripture authorizes him to draw are cogently appraised

Twentieth-Century Theologians Philip Kennedy, 2010-01-30 One needs to be a lunatic to become a Christian the 19th century Danish philosopher Søren Kierkegaard once observed Had he lived in the 20th century he might have discerned even more of an obstacle to faith For during the last century the human condition changed more rapidly than during any previous era taking that condition far away from the historical circumstances in which Christianity was born In his new book Philip Kennedy explores the ways Christian theologians of the 20th century tried to live a productive religious life in a world overtaken by massive upheaval and innovation The book is distinctive in a number of respects First it differs from other surveys of theology by adopting a biographical method examining the lives of its subjects in historical context Second it is more progressive than its competitors covering many theologians other than white male professors especially women who have worked outside the academy or on the margins of the churches Third it is international focusing on theologians in all the continents of the world rather than just Europe or North America Fourth it makes no assumptions that its readers are religious or that theology is uniquely credible There is a need for a sensitive new textbook reassessing the subject in the light of modern concerns and scepticism about religion This book meets that need

Is the Quest for Meaning the Quest for God? W. Stoker, 1996 Traditionally religion was the supplier of meaning It is often said that the quest for meaning is at bottom a quest for God a quest that can only find an adequate answer in religion But then what is the alternative for those who reject religion Emptiness and meaninglessness as Nietzsche succinctly formulated it We have killed God Are we not straying as through an infinite nothing In the meantime non-believers have found a solution for the crisis in meaning People are not usually nihilists but live their lives and consider them to be meaningful without religion This study is concerned with determining once again the place of the ascription of meaning from the perspective of the Christian faith in its relation to the non religious ascription of meaning For this purpose an analysis is given of contemporary theological and philosophical views of the problem of meaning The crisis of meaning as it has arisen in Nietzsche and the theatre of the absurd is examined Stoker also discusses contemporary forms of the ascription of meaning without religion such as self actualization and functional rationality as sources of meaning Stoker rejects an apologetics of need He posits that the Christian faith does not have an exclusive right to the ascription of meaning but this obtains also for secular forms of the ascription of meaning such as humanism Is God then the ultimate concern of each person From the perspective of the Christian faith yes but this does not mean that the non religious ascription of meaning as such must be viewed negatively Stoker illustrates how the religious and the non religious ascriptions of meaning are similar and how they differ Both are intended to be the source of meaning for human questions of life and death With respect to their differences the author demonstrates that the ascription of meaning from the perspective of the Christian faith does not entail a disqualification of a non religious worldview but is intended to make people more human
