

Graham Greene on William Gerhardie:

"I was about to leave school for Oxford when Mr. Gerhardie's first novel, Fasting, was published. And it has left an indelible impression. I was leaving Oxford when its successor, The Foghorn, appeared. To know of any generation he was the most important new novelist to appear in our young life. We were proud of his early and immediate success, like men who have spotted the right horse, and his novel is right, not only for the great public but by the author's intent, has always remained a masterpiece."

The (London) Times on God's Fifth Column:

"God's Fifth Column is history written by a master of the modern novel under brilliant and carefully wrought epigrams... (24) In history, however dramatic, there is no more all the time. It takes its breath in description: the deaths of Tolstoy, Churchill and those few great artists who supply the drama of their own lives. The slow descent to the end of the war and his family, with the sense of the inevitable approach of death, would have been a journey back to Russia, and the war... It is a continuously readable, stimulating, and impressive work."
