Cerberus - Original Edition Francis Stevens,2020-12-04 His thin face indefinably boyish for all its gauntness wore that placid uncaring look which death shares with complete insensibility Under him his right arm was doubled in an uncomfortable strained position while the left hand slender and well cared for trailed limp to the floor by the bedside On his right temple there showed an ugly wound evidently made by some blunt heavy instrument for the skin was burst rather than cut His fair hair was plastered with blood from the wound and a good deal of blood had also run down over the side of the face lending a sinister and tragic aspect to his otherwise not unpleasant countenance Fully dressed in a rather shabby blue serge both appearance and attitude suggested that the man had been flung down here and left brutally to die or revive as he might The Fifth Head of Cerberus Gene Wolfe,1972 Francis Stevens - The Heads of Cerberus: "these Heads, with Savage, Snarling Jaws, All Emerged from One Collar, Set with Five Small But Brilliant Rubi Francis Stevens,2018-08-22 A pseudonym of Gertrude Barrows Bennett Gertrude Barrows Bennett was born in Minneapolis on 18th September 1884 She completed school up to the eighth grade then switched to night school to study illustration unfortunately she was never able to achieve a career in this As a fall back she began working as a stenographer a career which she would keep to for the rest of her life But Gertrude had talent writer s talent Her first short story was written when she was 17 Not you would think the usual subjects of curious teenage girls with headstrong ambitions but a science fiction story entitled The Curious Experience of Thomas Dunbar She mailed the finished story to Argosy one of the most well known of the pulp magazines The story was published in the March 1904 issue Whilst her career was to be short and not at all prolific she is best remembered for her excellent ideas many of which were way ahead of their time By the time of her death in 1948 her pseudonym of Francis Stevens could lay claim to being a respected and much admired author of science fiction and dark fantasy short stories and novels The Heads of Cerberus Francis Stevens, Gertrude Barrows Bennett,2020-05-23 Illustrated with images by Virgil Finlay from the original editions of Stevens work In a career that spanned a mere three years Gertrude Barrows Bennett writing as Francis Stevens published half a dozen books that came to define the genres that followed on she is most popularly known as the woman who invented dark fantasy but on the way she also invented a new creepier kind of dystopian Sci Fi The Heads of Cerberus is set in a dystopian Philadelphia in 2118 It has been described as perhaps the first science fantasy to use the alternate time track or parallel worlds idea Groff Conklin a pioneering variation on the parallel worlds theme Boucher and McComas a highly imaginative work one of the classics of early pulp fantastic fiction Everett F Bleiler Stevens to her credit manages to keep her story taut and suspenseful at the same time that she injects pleasing snippets of humor here and there mainly thanks to the character of Arnold Bertram a portly thief who had tried to rifle Trenmore's safe back home and had also been thrown into the year 2118 as a result. The author presciently posits the coming of a second World War and yet her Philadelphia of two centuries hence still somehow contains clanging street cars, shooting galleries and movie theaters. I love that fact that Stevens puts the word movie in quotes, first used around 1911, it must have still seemed a newish slangy word by 1918. A pseudo scientific explanation at the novel's end for all the mishegas that had come before goes far in claiming for the book its place of pride in the early sci fi field. If Stevens' work here can be charged with a fault, however, it is its use of not just coincidence but double coincidence. Besides the staggering one that opens the book Drayton just happening to choose to rob a house that unbeknownst to him belongs to an old friend, we also have Bertram choosing of all the hotel rooms in 22nd century Philly our trio's hotel room to rob after he arrives. Once the reader manages to overlook these minor matters, however, a most entertaining and atmospheric read will be in store. Sandy Ferber, fantasyliterature.com

The Heads of Cerberus and Other Stories Francis Stevens, 2024-09-17 Exposed to a high tech dust that can transport people from one dimension to another, three travelers must try to escape the totalitarian Philadelphia of 2118. When three people in Philadelphia inhale dust developed by a scientist who has discovered parallel universes, they are transported into an interdimensional no man's land that is populated by supernatural beings. From there they go on to an alternate future version of Philadelphia, a frightening dystopian nation state in which citizens are numbered, not named. How will they escape? In The Heads of Cerberus and Other Stories, introduced by Lisa Yaszek, you will find this world bending story as well as five others written by Francis Stevens, the pseudonym of Gertrude Barrows Bennett, a pioneering science fiction and fantasy adventure writer from Minneapolis who made her literary debut at the precocious age of 17. Often celebrated as the woman who invented dark fantasy, Bennett possessed incredible range; her groundbreaking stories produced largely between 1904 and 1919 suggest that she is better understood as the mother of modern genre fiction. writ large, Bennett's work has anticipated everything from the work of Philip K. Dick to Superman comics to The Hunger Games, making it as relevant now as it ever was. Francis Stevens, Gertrude Barrows Bennett 1884-1948 was the first American woman to publish widely in fantasy and science fiction. Her five short stories and seven longer works of fiction, all of which appeared in pulp magazines such as Argosy, All Story Weekly and Weird Tales, would influence everyone from H. P. Lovecraft to C. L. Moore.
