Health and Disease in Four Peruvian Villages Alfred A. Buck,1968 Selected Bibliographies and State-of-the-art Review for Environmental Health Plog Research, inc,1979 Anthropology and Epidemiology C. Janes,R. Stall,S.M. Gifford,2012-12-06 Over the past two decades increasing interest has emerged in the contributions that the social sciences might make to the epidemiological study of patterns of health and disease Several reasons can be cited for this increasing interest Primary among these has been the rise of the chronic non infectious diseases as important causes of morbidity and mortality within Western populations during the 20th century Generally speaking the chronic non infectious diseases are strongly influenced by lifestyle variables which are themselves strongly influenced by social and cultural forces The understanding of the effects of the behavioral factors in say hypertension thus requires an understanding of the social and cultural factors which encourage obesity a sedentary lifestyle non compliance with anti hypertensive medications or other prescribed regimens and stress Equally there is a growing awareness that considerations of human behavior and its social and cultural determinants are important for understanding the distribution and control of infectious diseases Related to this expansion of epidemiologic interest into the behavioral realm has been the development of etiological models which focus on the psychological biological and socio cultural characteristics of hosts rather than exclusive concern with exposure to a particular agent or even behavioral risk Also during this period advances in statistical and computing techniques have made accessible the ready testing of multivariate causal models and so have encouraged the measurement of the effects of social and cultural factors on disease occurrence The People Of The Colca Valley David Noble Cook,Noble D Cook,2022-02-23 While it now attracts many tourists the Colca Valley of Peru s southern Andes was largely isolated from the outside world until the 1970s when a passable road was built linking the valley and its colonial churches terraced hillsides and deep canyon to the city of Arequipa and its airport eight hours away Noble David Cook and his co researcher Alexandra Parma Cook have been studying the Colca Valley since 1974 and this detailed ethnohistory reflects their decades long engagement with the valley its history and its people Drawing on unusually rich surviving documentary evidence they explore the cultural transformations experienced by the first three generations of Indians and Europeans in the region following the Spanish conquest of the Incas Plural Medical Systems In The Horn Of Africa: The Legacy Of Sheikh Hippocrates Leendert Jan Slikkerveer,2013-10-28 First Published in 1990 This study is an important landmark in our understanding of the complexities of pluralistic medical systems It is an unusual study as it provides an overview of the indigenous Oromo and Amhara the regional Greaco Arabic and the cosmopolitan health systems in the Horn of Africa using a variety of approaches and methodologies International Health Planning Reference Series ,1979 The Biology of High-Altitude Peoples Paul T. Baker,1978-04-13 Analyzes the biology of the various groups of people who live at high altitudes Guide to the Hispanic American Historical Review, 1956-1975 Wilber A. Chaffee,Beecher C. Afghanistan Alfred A. Buck,1972 An Ecology of High-Altitude Infancy Andrea S. Wiley,2004-03-22 Andrea Wiley investigates the ecological historical and socio cultural factors that contribute to the peculiar pattern of infant mortality in Ladakh a high altitude region in the western Himalayas of India Ladakhi newborns are extremely small at birth smaller than those in other high altitude populations smaller still than those in sea level regions Factors such as hypoxia dietary patterns the burden of women s work gender infectious diseases seasonality and use of local health resources all affect a newborn s birth weight and raise the likelihood of infant mortality An Ecology of High Altitude Infancy is unique in that it makes use of the methods of human biology but strongly emphasizes the ethnographic context that gives human biological measures their meaning It is an example of a new genre of anthropological work ethnographic human biology The Aymara W.J. Schull,F. Rothhammer,2012-12-06 South America s Andean highlands have seen the rise and decline of several impressive indigenous civilizations Separated somewhat in time and place each developed its distinctive socio cultural accouterments but all shared a need to adjust to the individual societal and environmental limitations imposed by life at high altitude Partial oxygen pressure temperature and humidity fall systematically as altitude rises but there are other changes as well Darwin Forbes von Humboldt von Tschudi and other naturalists of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries who weaved their way through South America commented repeatedly on the tolerance or apparent indifference of the indigenes to the rigors of life at altitudes above 3000 meters but its impact upon lowlanders Von Tschudi 1847 for example observed in the cordillera the effect of the diminished atmospheric pressure on the human frame shows itself in intolerable symptoms of weariness and an extreme difficulty of breathing The first symptoms are usually felt at the elevation of 12 600 feet 3800 m above the sea These symptoms are vertigo dimness of sight and hearing pains in the head and nausea Inhabitants of the coast and Europeans who for the first time visit the lofty regions of the cordillera are usually attacked with this disorder But von Tschudi s description of acute mountain sickness was hardly the first his Spanish predecessors had known and commented upon it too
