Illness and Health Services in an Aging Population United States. Public Health Service, 1952 Healthcare Transitions and the Aging Population Dianne Morrow Ross, 2008 Healthcare services for the aging population in the United States are a complex configuration of acute healthcare organizations and post acute nursing facilities home healthcare and community based services The system encompasses all services that imply the need for clinical medical or professional judgment Baldrige National Quality Program 2006 Most Americans believe the system exists to provide preventive services management for chronic conditions and health care services to meet the needs of the people National Committee for Quality Assurance NCQA 2004 However the healthcare delivery system is fragmented across a broad array of settings Coleman Smith Frank Min Parry Kramer 2004 plagued by gaps in quality of care and does not provide optimal care to the majority of American citizens NCQA 2004 As a result national efforts are focused on the identification of quality indicators performance measures and the driving need for consensus standards across a multiplicity of providers payers and stakeholders The overarching focus of this effort is to bridge the gaps in health care quality and reduce documented disparities for vulnerable populations National Quality Forum 2004 Healthcare transitions occur as patients receive a broad range of services across a multiplicity of providers payers and settings Aging patients 65 are most vulnerable during these transitions A poorly executed transition can result in complications for the patient duplication of tests and services discharge delays increased lengths of stay early readmissions to the acute care setting frustration for families and care givers and dissatisfaction with overall services Management of care and accountability across settings is limited and patients are falling through the cracks in the foundation of the healthcare system Covinsky 2003 The intent of this research was to examine healthcare transitions for patients 65 admitted to a large acute healthcare system and to identify measurable quality indicators for an innovative delivery model designed to optimize early discharge from the hospital through rapid rehabilitation This was a quasi experimental cross sectional design measured at the patient level The research included a total sample of 250 patients representing both the intervention and the control group The intervention group consisted of 100 patients who were rapidly discharged to a transitional care facility in the community and 150 patients randomly selected to a control group that did not transition to rapid rehabilitation The groups were matched as closely as possible by age gender race primary diagnoses and the complexity of case Inefficiency was measured by 3 indicators 1 length of stay 2 total expenses before contractual allowances and 3 discharge delays from the hospital Ineffectiveness was measured by 3 indicators 1 readmission within 30 days 2 patient safety with falls serving as the proxy and 3 overall patient satisfaction Descriptive analysis was performed utilizing SPSS 15.0 Path analysis was method of choice for data analysis and AMOS 7.0 was utilized for the measurement model Descriptive analysis found a broad range of diagnosis related groups across 183 women and 67 men with a mean age of 80 for both groups Initial analysis found the intervention group had a mean length of stay of 9.17 days and experienced 20 readmissions The control group had a mean length of stay of 6.77 days and 30 readmissions The statistical analysis

suggested length of stay and cost of healthcare services are statistically significant indicators at the 0.05 or lower level and that patient safety has the potential to be developed as an indicator for effective outcomes. The identification of quality indicators, measurement of efficiency and effectiveness, and establishing predictors for successful healthcare transitions is dependent on the quality and integrity of data abstracted from hospital information systems, accuracy of information in patient records, and the consensus of standards and definitions across a multiplicity of stakeholders. Further research and collaboration is necessary to ensure that patient transition to innovative care programs such as rapid rehabilitation is based on well-defined patient selection criteria. The intent of the methodologies and quality indicators explored in this research supports the increasing need to ensure that inferences and quality measurements drawn from healthcare information is based on valid, reliable, and well-defined data sources. Pan Fergusson, Schweitzer, Hebert, 2005. This research suggests hospitals are making steady progress to overcome challenges to safe quality health services as outlined by the Institute of Medicine, 2001, for system redesign but finds specific implications for hospital leadership. There is a need to thread evidence-based practice initiatives into hospital and clinical structures to accommodate new delivery models, processes, and case management. Health services information needs to be housed in a central repository or data warehouse to increase transparency of reportable information across systems and to ensure that valid and reliable information is utilized to draw inferences about performance of hospital systems. Selden, Sowa, 2004, and that quality measurements are established to ensure a scientific foundation for the management of healthcare services. Wan, 2002.

Illness and Health Services in an Aging Population United States. Division of Public Health Methods, 1952. Improving the Health and Health Care of Older Americans AHRQ Task Force on Aging, 2001. Designing Telehealth for an Aging Population Neil Charness, George Demiris, Elizabeth Krupinski, 2011-10-11. Providing up to date practical advice on how to design, select, and structure telemedicine interventions with older adults, this book discusses the age-related changes that can affect the efficacy of these systems. It defines best practices and general guidelines for telemedicine use with older populations of both patients and health care practitioners. Ideal for anyone interested in designing, delivering, or evaluating telehealth interventions for older adults, this book gives the necessary background on aging and human factors issues as well as the specific keys needed to implement a successful program. Global population aging - health care, social and economic consequences, volume II Mihajlo Jakovljevic, Seiritsu Ogura, 2023-05-11. Preparing for Better Health and Health Care for an Aging Population John W. Rowe, Lisa Berkman, Linda Fried, Terry Fulmer, James Jackson, Mary Naylor, William Novelli, Jay Olshansky, Robyn Stone, 2016. The proportion of the US population over 65 years old is increasing dramatically, and the group over 85 years old, the oldest old, is the most rapidly growing segment. People who survive into higher ages in America, which itself is an aging society, face a suite of competing forces that will yield healthy life extension for some and life extension accompanied by notable increases in frailty and disability for many. We spend more for worse outcomes than many, if not all, other developed countries, including care for older persons Looking forward our health care system is unprepared to provide the medical and support services needed for previously unimagined numbers of sick older persons and we are not investing in keeping people healthy into their highest ages This paper summarizes the opportunities for valuable policy advances in several important spheres that are central to the health and well being of older persons Innovations in Older Adult Care and Health Service Management: A Focus on China Madhan Balasubramanian, Angie Shafei, Zhanming Liang, 2024-06-19 Population aging is a consistent global demographic trend The growth in both the size and proportion of older adults has threatened the sustainability of health systems in meeting healthcare needs of the population Countries in the Asia Pacific Region may face even more complex health system challenges due to the diversity in culture management and leadership styles composition of health service provision investment in research infrastructure and innovation adaptation data availability and gaps in information technology Sustainable Health and Long-Term Care Solutions for an Aging Population Ben Y.
