Raymond Friday Locke,1971 Contained in this pictorial presentation are accounts of nine battles that have to one degree or another changed the course of world history The span covered ranges from the American Revolution to the stinging French defeat in Vietnam Had Vice Admiral Viscount Horatio Nelson failed to destroy the combined French and Spanish fleets at Trafalgar on an October afternoon in 1805 Napoleon would have realized his dream to invade Great Britain and the annals of European history would have been drastically altered And if the Russians had not stopped the German advance at Stalingrad our histories of World War II might very well contain an account of a total defeat of Russia Certainly if the French had won one crucial battle in Vietnam in 1954 the account of American History for the last decade would probably detail a continued
