Economic Geography Of The Tourist Industry A Supply Side Analysis:

The Economic Geography of the Tourist Industry Keith G. Debbage, Dimitri Ioannides, 1998-04-02 The Economic Geography of the Tourist Industry bridges the gap between tourism research and economic geography by bringing together leading academics in geography planning and tourism The authors explain tourism's definitions and examine whether tourism can be categorized as an industry They provide detailed analyses of key sectors such as tour Geography of the Tourist Industry by U.S. Metropolitan Area Omer Abdalla Omer, 2010 The research in this dissertation articulates the economic geography of the tourist industry in the United States by metropolitan statistical area MSA from a supply side perspective It examines the complex economic mix of the tourism production system by employment patterns number of establishments and wages One of the key purposes of this dissertation is to analyze the intense geographical concentration that underlies the tourist industry and to identify the typologies of metropolitan based economies that explain much of the clusters A key hypothesis is that although the tourism direct providers e g hotels airlines etc attract more attention in the tourism geography literature than tourism supply service industries e g food and drinking services performing arts etc that a broad economic equivalence exists between these macro sectors in terms of number of jobs and establishments by MSA Overall it is hypothesized that the tourism production system is largely shaped by the logic of agglomeration theory and that metropolitan area economies that experience high levels of specialization as expressed by elevated tourism related market shares in terms of jobs and establishments will also generate a higher overall tourism average wage Another purpose of this dissertation was to examine the overall impact of tourism specialization on quality of life scores as indicated by per capita income percent of population with college degrees and population growth rates Furthermore the dissertation examined whether metropolitan area economies that attract disproportionately high levels of tourism market share in terms of employment also attract disproportionate creative class employment based on Florida s 2002 definition The overall analysis revealed that a broad economic equivalency in terms of number of jobs and number of establishments exists between tourism direct providers e g air transportation and hotels and the tourism supporting services e g restaurants performing arts and sports Additionally the findings highlighted an acute geographic concentration of the tourism production system The top ten MSAs in terms of employment market share accounted for 40% of all tourism jobs The analysis also revealed that four major tourism MSA typologies existed including casino based coastal resort retirement resorts and natural resource gateway metropolitan areas The findings further revealed that tourism average wages varied by MSA and they were highly influenced by the level of tourism concentration and specialization partly due to an economies of scale and agglomeration effect The analysis supported the notion that the tourism industry s overall impact on various quality of life indicators was largely random suggesting that the general notion that tourism can be a panacea for an urban economies ill needs to be re evaluated and questioned The analysis also showed that a random relationship existed between tourism employment levels and the percent creative class employment contrary to much of the literature Additionally the analysis also suggested that a statistically significant correlation existed between percent creative class employment and cultural tourism employment e g performing arts spectator sports etc Suggesting that targeting culturally oriented tourism amenities may be a more effective strategy to attract the creative class Data sets for the dissertation came from different sources including The Bureau of Economic Analysis BEA The Bureau of Labor Statistics BLS and The Census Bureau The North American Industrial Classification System NAICS methodology was used to quantify the tourist industry from a supply side perspective Abstract from author supplied metadata Economic Geography of Tourism João Romão, 2025-05-13 This book provides an in depth exploration of the dynamic intersections between economic geography and tourism highlighting how spatial economic and social processes shape tourism development and how tourism in turn transforms economic spaces Combining theoretical insights with real world case studies it offers a comprehensive understanding of tourism's evolving role within economic geography. The first part lays a strong theoretical foundation introducing key concepts such as the Tourism Area Life Cycle path dependence agglomeration economies smart specialization and regional resilience within the context of tourism research It explores spatial and temporal patterns in tourism development the growing influence of digitalization and smart tourism and the roles of innovation and competitiveness in shaping destination dynamics The second part shifts focus to tourism's broader economic and social implications It critically assesses urban tourism's links to gentrification circular economies and social conflicts while exploring strategies to address spatial enclaves and foster integrated tourism networks in low density and fragile regions Environmental challenges including the impact of tourism mobility on local communities and ecosystems are also examined The book concludes by addressing the tensions and future trajectories of tourism development questioning whether sustainable or regenerative tourism can thrive within market driven economies where decision making prioritizes individual preferences over collective well being It calls for a reassessment of contemporary policy and regulatory frameworks to align tourism with broader economic and environmental goals By bridging economic geography and tourism studies this book equips scholars policymakers and practitioners with analytical tools to rethink tourism development and advocate for strategies that are economically viable and effectively sustainable inclusive and resilient The Wiley Blackwell Companion to Tourism Alan A. Lew, C. Michael Hall, Allan M. Williams, 2014-06-03 The Wiley Blackwell Companion to Tourism presents a collection of readings that represent an essential and authoritative reference on the state of the art of the interdisciplinary field of tourism studies Presents a comprehensive and critical overview of tourism studies across the social sciences Introduces emerging topics and reassesses key themes in tourism studies in the light of recent developments Includes 50 newly commissioned essays by leading experts in the social sciences from around the world Contains cutting edge perspectives on topics that include tourism's role in globalization sustainable tourism and the state s role in tourism development Sets an agenda for future tourism research and includes a

Telfer, 2002 This text explores the role of tourism as a potential contibutor to socio economic development in destination areas Establishing a link between tourism studies and development studies it considers what is meant by development the processes through which development may be achieved and in particular a number of fundamental issues related to the use of tourism as a development agent In so doing it challenges conventional thinking about the relationship between tourism and development

The Geography of Tourism and Recreation C. Michael Hall, Stephen J. Page, 2014-05-09 This fourth edition of The Geography of Tourism and Recreation provides students with a comprehensive introduction to the interrelationship between tourism leisure and recreation from geographical and social science perspectives It still remains the only book to systematically compare and contrast in a spatial context tourism and recreation in relation to leisure time offering insight into the demand supply planning destination management and impacts of tourism and recreation Whilst retaining its accessible style and approach this edition has been significantly updated to reflect recent developments and new concepts from geography which are beginning to permeate the tourism and recreational field New features include Content on the most recent developments climate change sustainability mobilities and crisis management in time and space as well as trends such as low cost airlines and the control of land transport by transnational operators in the EU such as Arriva More attention to management issues such as innovation and the spatial consequences for tourism and leisure development New case studies and examples to showcase real life issues from both developed and developing countries especially the US China and South Africa Completely revised and redeveloped to accommodate new user friendly features case studies insights summary points and learning objectives Written by leading academics this is essential reading for all tourism geography leisure and Political Economy of Tourism Jan Mosedale, 2010-01-11 Political economy in its various guises and transfigurations is a research philosophy that presents both social commentary and theoretical progress and is concerned with a number of different topics politics regulation and governance production systems social relations inequality and development amongst many others As a critical theory political economy seeks to provide an understanding of societies and of the structures and social relations that form them in order to evoke social change toward more equitable conditions Despite the early influence of critical development studies and political economy on tourism research political economy has received relatively little attention in tourism research Political Economy and Tourism the first volume to bring together different theoretical perspectives and discourse in political economy related to tourism Written by leading scholars the text is organised into three sequential Parts linked by the principle that the political and the economic are intimately connected Part one presents different approaches to political economy including Marxist political economy regulation comparative political economy commodity chain research and alternative political economies Part two links key themes of political economy such as class gender labour development and consumption to tourism and Part three examines the political economy at various geographical scales and focuses on the outcomes and processes of the political act of planning and managing tourism production This engaging volume provides insights and alternative critical perspectives on political economy theory to expand discussions of tourism development and policy in the future Political Economy and Tourism is a valuable text for students researchers and academics interested in Tourism and related disciplines Air Pollution Mara Llop, 2011 Annotation Environmental pollution has received the attention of both economists and ecologists who have integrated their ideas and concepts in recent decades Production and consumption of material goods generates residuals that are disposed in the environment Air emissions constitute one of the most important residuals including greenhouse gases as well as localized substances toxic to human health and the environment How economic activity affects gas emissions is valuable information for pollution control and is extremely useful for defining and implementing successful environmental policies aimed at improving the global efficiency of an economy The e book presents the relationship between economic activities and air pollution It describes research contributions focused on showing the properties and the usefulness of National Accounting Matrices with Environmental Accounts NAMEA Additionally demonstrates the most recent advances in the input output methodology and linear extended multisectorial models to capture the gas emissions processes with empirical applications of these methods to specific countries. The contents of the e book make it an interesting platform of new knowledge for both Tourism in the USA: Dimitri academic public and people in national agencies of environmental regulation Ioannides, Dallen Timothy, 2011-01-25 This is the first book to offer students a comprehensive overview of both tourism and travel in this region paying specific attention to the disciplines of Geography Tourism Studies and more generally Social Performing Tourist Places Jørgen Ole Bærenholdt, Michael Haldrup, John Urry, 2017-07-05 This book looks at the making and the consuming of places in the contemporary world Illustrated through a case on Denmark it considers the general arguments about the intersections of places performances and peoples It is shown that those who are visitors to a place in part produce that place through their performances Places are intertwined with people through various systems that generate and reproduce performances in and of that place These systems comprise networks of hosts guests buildings objects and machines that contingently realize particular performances of specific places The studies reported here further develop what we might describe as the new mobility paradigm that is developing within the social sciences Area Lifecycle Richard Butler, 2011-04-30 Part of the Contemporary Review Series Contemporary Tourism Reviews will provide you with critical state of the art surveys of all of the major areas of tourism study to people who are coming to a topic for the first time Written by leading thinkers and academics in the field they provide flexible current and topical information as an instant download Tourism and Tourism Spaces Gareth Shaw, Allan M Williams, 2004-03-18 This is a critical introduction to the relations between tourism tourists and tourism spaces It fuses economic and cultural perspectives to explain how tourism is dependent on place and space while at the same time as defining those places and spaces Examining different levels of scale from local to global Tourism and Tourism Spaces is informed by the discussion of three key processes production and consumption of tourist spaces consumption and commodification of tourist experiences construction and reconstruction of tourist spaces Each chapter engages with different theoretical perspectives is illustrated with comparative examples and case studies uses tables boxes and figures throughout and concludes with a summary An integrated and systematic review of a range of theoretical positions that integrates economic and cultural Tourism and Tourism Spaces will be a key resource for students of geography sociology management studies hospitality studies and leisure studies New Research Paradigms in Tourism Geography Alan A. Lew, 2017-10-02 This collection of papers from Tourism Geographies emphasizes new and emerging research paradigms in the geographic study of tourism The papers included in this collection follow one of two threads explicitly supporting specific research frameworks or implicitly presenting new and emerging theoretical perspectives through empirical research on the geographical topics These begin with three overview papers from themes that emerged from recent annual meetings of the Association of American Geographers including evolutionary economic geography EEG political ecology and community resilience Each of these theoretical and conceptual frameworks is leading to new explorations and insights in a wide variety of geographical and social science research including tourism studies These are followed by a series of papers that extend our knowledge and thinking on a range of key geographical topics including development and underdevelopment by Saarinen Rogerson sustainable tourism planning by Torres Delgado Saarinen encounters with the natural environment by Hill and the geography of place names by Light as well as economic geography and new technologies and their applications to spatial behavior research. The papers in this special issue are especially relevant to tourism scholars and very much represent the types of perspectives that Tourism Geographies seek to promote This book was published as a special issue of Tourism Geographies Innovation and Tourism Destination Development Henrik Halkier, Marek Kozak, Bo Svensson, 2017-10-02 Tourism is a central part of regional development strategies in many localities around Europe not just in traditional coastal or mountain resorts but also in areas without a strong track record with regard to visitor economy In a globalising world destinations can no longer take their traditional visitors for granted and escape growing competitive pressures because increasingly experienced specialised and demanding travellers now have a vastly greater number of potential destinations to choose from Both well established and emerging tourist destinations are therefore under pressure to be innovative to increase their attractiveness in the globalising visitor economy This book focuses on the role played by tourist destinations conceived as multi layered and functional governance structures in stimulating or complicating the development of new tourist experiences. The complex relationship between firm level and territorial development dynamics is of course by no means confined to tourism development and the book will therefore be of a more general relevance for research into innovation and spatial development dynamics This book was published as a special issue of European Planning Studies International Business and Tourism Tim Coles, C. Michael Hall, 2008-03-10 Whether its bungee jumping in Queenstown or visiting the Guinness factory in Dublin where we travel and what we do when we get there has changed significantly in the past twenty years This innovative textbook explores what is possibly the most unrecognized of international service industries placing tourism in the context of contemporary gl
