Translating Humour Jeroen Vandaele, 2016-04-08 It is all too often assumed that humour is the very effect of a text But humour is not a perlocutionary effect in its own right nor is laughter The humour of a text may be as general a characteristic as a serious text's seriousness Like serious texts humorous texts have many different purposes and effects They can be subdivided into specific subgenres with their own perlocutionary effects their own types of laughter or even other reactions Translation scholars need to be able to distinguish between various kinds of humour or humorous effect when comparing source and target texts especially since the notion of effect pops up so frequently in the evaluation of humorous texts and their translations In this special issue of The Translator an attempt is made to delineate types of humorous effect through careful linguistic and cultural analyses of specific examples and or the introduction of new analytical tools For a translator who is both a receiver of the source text and sender of the target text such analyses and tools may prove useful in grasping and pinning down the perlocutionary effect of a source text and devising strategies for producing comparable effects in the target text For a translation scholar who is a receiver of both source and target texts the contributions in this issue will hopefully provide an analytical framework for the comparison of source and target perlocutionary effects The

Ideal of the Courtly

Gentleman in Spanish Literature Francesco Raimondo Ph D, Francesco Raimondo, 2013-05 In this study on the subject of the Spanish courtly gentleman of the sixteenth century the author traces the courtly gentleman's life ideals as they appear first in Montalvo's Amadis de Gaula and later in Il Cortegiano of Castiglione The study also appraises what new perspectives and attitudes are at the center of Castiglione's view of cortegiania and how these elements are reflected in other Spanish courtesy books subsequent to The Courtier's arrival and publication in Spain In the last part of the book the author deals with the theme of courtliness in Don Quixote and with Cervantes's attitude toward the courtier's pursuits aspirations and lifestyle He also analyzes through the study of selected works of Calderón and Gracián certain problems of self perception moral conscience and outlook that distinguish the ideal man of the baroque age as envisioned by these authors from his renaissance counterpart On the whole the study points to the gradual change and process of secularization of the courtier's
