

THE GOODNIGHT TRAIL SYSTEM (1866 - 1885)

Because of the problems with winters and quarantines on the Shawnee Trail, a young Texas cattleman by the name of Charles Goodnight decided to try another approach to trailing cattle north in 1866. He would go westward. In order to avoid possible confrontations with Plains Indians, he took a wide sweep south and west around the Texas Panhandle and trailed to Fort Sumner in New Mexico Territory. On this initial drive was a new partner by the name of Oliver Loving. The older and more experienced cattleman commanded the herd. Their new route was later referred to as the Goodnight-Loving Trail.

After the death of Loving, as a result of an Indian attack, in 1867, Goodnight continued to drive cattle into New Mexico and Colorado Territories. Because of the reaction to the Texas Fever, he failed to move north in 1868, one that was dry and very miles east of Loving's Trail. In 1869, Goodnight moved his route further east again, to distance the herd even more from the ever encroaching settlements along the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains.

With the continuing pressure from local ranchmen in Colorado Territory, Goodnight moved his northern route once again in 1875. It was referred to as the "new trail." In the following year, Goodnight established his Palo Duro Canyon Ranch in the Texas Panhandle. From this location, he branched the Palo Duro-Dodge City Trail to Dodge City, Kansas, which was used until Dodge City was closed by quarantine. No other Texas established as many cattle trails as Charles Goodnight.
