

Survival strategies for desperate teachers

My personal guideline to find your way out in tough times

1. We are always into the spotlight and our show must go on, anyway. This is why it is advisable to be always ready with some extra material, as well as to save your files neatly. Divide your teaching material by level, by topic, etc. In this way, you can easily find what you need, straight away.

2. Make your student become as much independent as possible. Let them do exercises by themselves and use Dictionaries in class. This is good for them and, at the same time, you gain extra time for planning.

Google

3. Whenever I have some doubts about "my" English, I enter the sentence in Google and if there are only a few pages listed, there must be something wrong. I sometimes do also a Google fight whenever in doubt between two words. Then, I use the "Images" tool to search pictures or clipart directly. And when I am lucky, I might find what I'm looking for just with one click.

You Tube

4. If your worksheet seems to be missing something, enter the key word of your lesson into www.youtube.com. You'll be amazed by the amount of useful stuff that might find in there. A short clip is a stunning resource for "last minute" listening.

5. And for the most desperate situations.....think positive. You will get a solution, sooner or later.
