The European Garden Flora Flowering Plants James Cullen, Sabina G. Knees, H. Suzanne Cubey, J. M. H. Shaw, 2011-08-11
The European Garden Flora is the definitive manual for the accurate identification of cultivated ornamental flowering plants. Designed to meet the highest scientific standards, the vocabulary has nevertheless been kept as uncomplicated as possible so that the work is fully accessible to the informed gardener as well as to the professional botanist. This new edition has been thoroughly reorganised and revised, bringing it into line with modern taxonomic knowledge. Although European in name, the Flora covers plants cultivated in most areas of the United States and Canada as well as in non-tropical parts of Asia and Australasia. Volume 4 contains accounts of 82 families, mostly rather small but including the Primulaceae with Primula as its largest genus and Ericaceae with Rhododendron the largest genus in the Flora.

Climate and Society in Europe

Christian Pfister, Heinz Wanner, 2021-09-06
A richly illustrated book on the history of climate change in Europe. Two perspectives: one unique book, two leading experts: a historian and a climatologist co-author a new standard work on climate history. An overview of the connection between climatic and social developments over the last 1000 years. For the first time, a historian and a climatologist with knowledge of climate history have worked closely together to create a unique book combining climate reconstructions based on documented data in their human historical context with temporally highly resolved analyses of climate and glaciers. Here we can clearly see how changes in climate affected the environment and people of Europe over many centuries, with important lessons for the future. A wonderfully engaging and well-documented account by two of Europe's leading climate scientists: Prof. Dr. Raymond Bradley, Director, Climate System Research Center, University of Massachusetts Amherst, USA. This unique book provides new fascinating insights into the interaction of past climate and society in Europe. It can be highly recommended to climatologists, historians, and geoscientists but also to students and the broad public. Prof. Dr. Rudolf Bräzdil, Department of Geography, Masaryk University Brno, Czech Republic. The authors offer a truly interdisciplinary combination of history and science in order to explore the complex relationships of climate and society over the past millennium. They demonstrate convincingly that climate change is nothing new, while at the same time revealing the character of the unprecedented climatic epoch mankind now faces. Prof. Dr. Jan de Vries, Professor Emeritus of History and Economics, University of California Berkeley, USA. Christian Pfister is Professor Emeritus of Economic, Social, and Environmental History at the University of Bern, Switzerland. He was founding president of the European Society for Environmental History (ESEH). Heinz Wanner is Professor Emeritus of Geography and Climatology. He was co-chair of the international Past Global Changes (PAGES) project and a member of the UN Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC). Both scientists work at the renowned Oeschger Centre for Climate Change Research at the University of Bern.

Before Copernicus Rivka Feldhay, F. Jamil Ragep, 2017-06-12
In 1984, Noel Swerdlow and Otto Neugebauer argued that Nicolaus Copernicus (1473–1543) explained planetary motion by using mathematical devices and astronomical models originally developed by Islamic astronomers in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries Was this a parallel development or did Copernicus somehow learn of the work of his predecessors and if so how And if Copernicus did use material from the Islamic world how then should we understand the European context of his innovative cosmology Although Copernicus's work has been subject to a number of excellent studies there has been little attention paid to the sources and diverse cultures that might have inspired him Foregrounding the importance of interactions between Islamic and European astronomers and philosophers Before Copernicus explores the multi cultural multi religious and multi lingual context of learning on the eve of the Copernican revolution determining the relationship between Copernicus and his predecessors Essays by Christopher Celenza and Nancy Bisaha delve into the European cultural and intellectual contexts of the fifteenth century revealing both the profound differences between them and us and the nascent attitudes that would mark the turn to modernity Michael Shank F Jamil Ragep Sally Ragep and Robert Morrison depict the vibrant and creative work of astronomers in the Christian Islamic and Jewish worlds In other essays Rivka Feldhay Raz Chen Morris and Edith Sylla demonstrate the importance of shifting outlooks that were critical for the emergence of a new worldview Highlighting the often neglected intercultural exchange between Islam and early modern Europe Before Copernicus reimagines the scientific revolution in a global context
