

Every night at five, millions of viewers across the country tune in to Susan Stamberg, anchor of All Things Considered, the most intimate, trenchant, and entertaining news program on the radio and All Things Considered. They tune in for timely analyses of information and imagination, from reporters who speak to them as if they were friends across the back fence. And they tune in to hear each other—the voices of ordinary citizens are a regular part of the program—their responses to news events, their prayers for good health, world peace, or carrot cake.

In Every Night at Five, host Susan Stamberg celebrates the anniversary of the program with a collection of the best moments from a decade of broadcasts. The pieces consider all things

- teenage sexuality
- a Mass rally in Chicago
- interviews with authors Joan Dixon and John Irving
- Watergate
- a memorial service for John Lennon
- how to ripen pears, make marshmallows, unfreeze car locks
- Three Mile Island
- where to find the best hamburger in America
- Masha Stamberg's cranberry recipe

Stamberg also takes us behind the scenes to show us life at a radio network, the tensions and tricks of the trade, and an inventive young staff in tune with radio, whose free-wheeling curiosity has earned All Things Considered broadcast journalism's highest awards.

Susan Stamberg, the first woman to anchor a national news program, received the Edward R. Murrow Award for outstanding contributions to broadcasting. She lives in Washington, D.C., with her husband and son.
