Everybody Needs A Hideaway:

When the Land Turned Green Dean Bennett, Sheila Bennett, 2022-08-15 Deep in the wilderness of northern Maine in the mid 1950s a Harvard PhD student is wading down a mountain stream into a remote valley He is taking his first steps to map the geology of 300 square miles of Baxter State Park He soon discovers a series of unusually shaped rock outcrops part of an unknown geologic formation hundreds of millions of years old still mystifying today because of its relative lack of change despite nearby volcanic activity and massive land movement Wading on he has another surprise In a thin layer of black shale beside the stream he finds a small fossil of a plant Little does he know but his discovery of Perticaquadrifaria will help scientists unlock the details of a major event in the history of our planet the transition of plants to land an occurrence that continues to have a critical influence on the Earth's life supporting processes including climate The 400 million year old Devonian Era Pertica fossils have been found nowhere else on Earth but that enigmatic rock formation deep in the Maine woods Pertica was one of the very first land plants and is thought to have been the tallest of the time Today the site of the fossil's discovery lies in the shadow of an Eastern White Pine which now takes the ancient plant's place as the tallest plant on the land in the eastern United States This fascinating story explores the work of geologists and paleobotanists as they attempt to demystify the land and reveal the ancient life forms that settled on it It explores the hypothesis that these two tall plants Pertica and White Pine are related and asks What can these two plants one ancient and one modern tell us about the past and perhaps hint at the future
