Education And The Family:

Family Learning Titus Alexander, 1997 Education and the Family Leonard Kaplan, 1992 Family Living and Our Schools, Suggestions for Instructional Programs Joint Committee on Curriculum Aspects of Education for Home and Family Living of the Home Economics Department of the National Education Association and the Society for Curriculum Study, 1941

One of the major responsibilities of education is that of helping individuals of all ages to be more effective members of homes and of families Whatever the goals of a society the family can be and usually is the most effective agency for inculcating those goals and for transmitting them from one generation to the next The school should supplement and complement the home in its guidance of the child This means joint parent teacher responsibility the teacher understanding the influences playing upon the child in the home and the parents understanding the school's efforts to help the child realize his greatest potentialities Foreword

Education and the Family Leon Feinstein, Kathryn Duckworth, Ricardo Sabates, 2008-06-30 An analysis of the role of policy in challenging self-perpetuating social advantage in education This book takes the view that policy mechanisms are an essential part of overturning the persistence of social class differences and barriers to equality of opportunity

Family Engagement with Schools Nancy Feyl Chavkin, 2017 Family Engagement with Schools is unique because it is the only book written especially for social workers and social work students who work in partnership with educators The text introduces social workers to the new Dual Capacity Building Framework and the latest resources

Family Factors and the Educational Success of Children William Jeynes, 2014-02-25 Family Factors and the Educational Success of Children addresses a wide range of family variables and a diverse array of family situations in order to understand the dynamics of the multifaceted relationship between family realities and educational outcomes of children It provides research on building effective partnerships between parents and teaches the importance of parental style parental involvement as a means of improving family life the influence of family factors on children of color and the role of religion in influencing family and educational dynamics This book is a valuable resource for academics family scientists social workers psychologists parents and students The book contains research on a full variety of issues which will provide insight into a wide range of practical matters regarding the influence of the family The research methodology included in this book includes examining large data sets case studies research syntheses and other student surveys As a result of reading this book individuals will have greater insight into how a multitudinous number of family factors ultimately influence the educational success of children whether that is experienced directly or indirectly This book was published as a double special issue of Marriage and Family Review

Family Life Education Lane H. Powell, Dawn Cassidy, 2006-08-15 Contemporary family life educators must operate in a wide range of settings and with increasingly varied populations and families In the second edition of their successful Family Life Education Powell and Cassidy expertly expose readers to the diverse landscape of the field while laying a comprehensive practical foundation for future family life educators The authors both CFLE certified consider the Certified Family Life Educator certification requirements of the National Council on Family Relations throughout the text Their broad overview of the field features a blend of theory and practice with full chapters on sexuality education marriage education and parent education areas that have received evaluation and certification attention A new chapter on global trends builds awareness and appreciation of diversity through interactive classroom exercises Each chapter in the book concludes with discussion questions research problems independent study activities and case study suggestions all designed to challenge readers to think for themselves

Handbook of Family Life Education Margaret E. Arcus, Jay D. Schvaneveldt, J. Joel Moss, 1993-09-28 Handbook of Family Life Education covers a wide range of educational and preventive programs to improve the quality of individual and family life Although it has a long history only recently has there been a movement toward professionalization of these programs or an intellectual justification for them developed The Handbook of Family Life Education is the first to provide a framework for this field Its purpose is to provide an introduction to a critical perspective on family life education both its major intellectual themes and its areas of practice for researchers policymakers curriculum and program planners and practitioners Finally there is a comprehensive resource on family life education As the editors write in the preface previous handbooks included discussion of family life education but often only as one of the many chapters Further any earlier volume had become dated given the changes and evolving sophistication of the field A new reference resource was needed and these two volumes will meet that need Hats off to the editors Family Forum This book is the most extensive compilation of research and practice regarding family life education that has been written In the two volumes the editors have assembled a diverse group of scholars to describe the fundamental issues and to discuss the state of the art in family life education These two volumes provide an extensive foundation for scholars students and practitioners interested in family life education These volumes draw together an often disparate and disorganized body of knowledge and establish a basis for considering theoretical and methodological issues Many of the chapters provide thorough reviews and critiques of the family life programs and insightful recommendations about future decisions the Handbook of Family Life Education is a substantial contribution to the field and will be very useful in undergraduate and graduate courses on family life education and to scholars and practitioners interested in other important issues confronting the field Family Relations This is without a doubt the most complete encyclopedic treatise on family life education available on the market bar none It contains all the information that either beginning family life educators or consummate professionals need to know about this field past present and future I recommend it wholeheartedly not only to family life educators but also to marriage and family therapists Perhaps in the not too distant future all of the information contained in both volumes will be used by anyone who is interested in helping families regardless of professional identity or theoretical orientation Luciano L Abate Georgia State University

Rethinking Family-school Relations Maria Eulina de Carvalho, 2000-10-01 This book addresses the complications and implications of parental involvement as a policy through an exploratory theoretical approach including historical and sociological accounts and personal reflection This approach represents the author's effort to understand the origins meanings and effects of parental involvement as a prerequisite of schooling and particularly as a policy solution for low achievement and even inequity in the American educational system Most of the policy and research discourse on school family relations exalts the partnership ideal taking for granted its desirability and viability the perspective of parents on specific involvement in instruction and the conditions of diverse families in fulfilling their appointed role in the partnership De Carvalho takes a distinct stance She argues that the partnership parental ideal neglects several major factors It proclaims parental involvement as a means to enhance and perhaps equalize school outcomes but disregards how family material and cultural conditions and feelings about schooling differ according to social class thus the partnership parental involvement ideal is more likely to be a projection of the model of upper middle class suburban community schooling than an open invitation for diverse families to recreate schooling Although it appeals to the image of the traditional community school the pressure for more family educational accountability really overlooks history as well as present social conditions Finally family school relations are relations of power but most families are powerless De Carvalho makes the case that two linked effects of this policy are the gravest the imposition of a particular parenting style and intrusion into family life and the escalation of educational inequality Rethinking Family School Relations A Critique of Parental Involvement in Schooling a carefully researched and persuasively argued work is essential reading for all school professionals parents and individuals concerned with public schooling and educational equality A New Generation of Evidence Anne T. Henderson, Nancy Berla, National Committee for Citizens in Education, 1994 This report covers 66 studies reviews reports analyses and books Of these 39 are new 27 have been carried over from previous editions An ERIC search was conducted to identify relevant studies Noting that the most accurate predictor of student achievement is the extent to which the family is involved in his or her education this report presents a collection of research papers on the function and importance of family to a student's achievement and education in school and the community The research is divided into two categories 1 studies on programs and interventions from early childhood through high school including school policy and 2 studies on family processes The first category presents studies that evaluate or assess the effects of programs and other interventions including early childhood and preschool programs and home visits for families with infants and toddlers programs to help elementary and middle schools work more closely with families and high school programs and community efforts to support families in providing wider opportunities for young people The second category presents studies on the way that families behave and interact with their children including the relationship between parent involvement and student achievement from the family perspective characteristics of families as learning environments and their effects on student performance and class and cultural mismatch Two pages are devoted to each study Each study is summarized key elements of the program and important findings are presented Major findings indicate that the family makes critical contributions to student achievement from the earliest childhood years through high school and efforts to improve children s outcomes are much more effective when the family is actively involved AP
