This book tracks the changes in government involvement in Indigenous children's education over the nineteenth century drawing on case studies from the Caribbean Australia and South Africa Schools were pivotal in the production and reproduction of racial difference in the colonies of settlement Between 1833 and 1880 there were remarkable changes in thinking about education in Britain and the Empire with it increasingly seen as a government responsibility At the same time children's needs came to be seen as different to those of their parents and childhood was approached as a time to make interventions into Indigenous people's lives This period also saw shifts in thinking about race Members of the public researchers missionaries and governments discussed the function of education considering whether it could be used to further humanitarian or settler colonial aims Underlying these questions were anxieties regarding the status of Indigenous people in newly colonised territories the successful education of their children could show their potential for equality     The Aesthetics of Education Tyson E. A groundbreaking work applying Ranciere's theories of aesthetics and politics to the field of teaching analysing the works of Dewey Freire and other education thinkers     The Education System in Mexico David Scott,C.M. Posner,Chris Martin,Elsa Guzman,2018-03-15

Over the last three decades a significant amount of research has sought to relate educational institutions policies practices and reforms to social structures and agencies A number of models have been developed that have become the basis for attempting to understand the complex relation between education and society At the same time national and international bodies tasked with improving educational performances seem to be writing in a void in that there is no rigorous theory guiding their work and their documents exhibit few references to groups institutions and forces that can impede or promote their programmes and projects As a result the recommendations these bodies provide to their clients display little to no comprehension of how and under what conditions the recommendations can be put into effect The Education System in Mexico directly addresses this problem By combining abstract insights with the practicalities of educational reforms policies practices and their social antecedents it offers a long overdue reflection of the history effects and significance of the Mexican educational system as well as presenting a more cogent understanding of the relationship between educational institutions and social forces in Mexico and around the world
