Effects Of Military Base Closures On Local Communities A Short Term Perspective:

The Effects of Military Base Closures on Local Communities: A Short-Term Perspective, 1996 Amid the decline in defense spending following the end of the Cold War military base closures have prompted some of the most vocal public concerns Public expectations of the impact often verge on the apocalyptic and economic forecasts of the local effects seem to bolster such fears While many studies have been done on the closure and revitalization process little new work has been done on the immediate economic impacts of base closures since the wave of closures after the Vietnam War This study examined the experience of the communities surrounding three of the largest bases closed in California since 1988 The bases were selected due to their large presence in the local community and to the fact that the communities were sufficiently isolated geographically that the effects could be expected to be both severe and measurable The study used a case study approach to examine the impact on nearby communities of three base closures George Air Force Base AFB located in San Bernardino County which closed in December 1992 Fort Ord located in Monterey County which closed in September 1994 Castle Air Force Base located in Merced County which was slated for closure in 1995 and from which 65 percent of its uniformed personnel had been vacated by October 1994 To assess the impact of base closures on local communities the study used nine measures two centering on changes in population four on changes in employment and three on changes in the housing market The study investigated how the closures impacted the size of the total population in nearby communities and the size of those communities school enrollments It looked at the size of neighboring communities labor forces their unemployment rates their taxable retail sales and their municipal revenues The Effects of Military Base Closures on Local Communities Michael Dardia, 1996 An analysis of the economic and social effects of defense downsizing Military Bases David R. Warren, Barry W. Holman, Kay D. Kuhlman, Marian H. Harvey, 1998-12 Focuses on lessons learned from four rounds of base realignments and closures BRACs held in 1988 1991 1993 and 1995 Addresses the applicability of these lessons to future BRACs as related to savings costs and economic impact legislative actions needed to authorize future BRAC rounds and what improvements would be needed in the Department of Defense's process for identifying bases for realignment and closure Charts and tables Military Base Closures David E. Lockwood, 2003 Approximately 13 years ago in December 1988 the first military base closure commission recommended the closing and realignment of 145 US domestic bases and facilities This action was the consequence of the Department of Defense's broad reevaluation of its mission in conjunction with the weakening and ultimate collapse of the Soviet Union There was little need according to the Pentagon to continue to retain the vast Cold War era infrastructure Funds saved from closing down underutilised bases DOD further noted could be used to enhance development of new weapons and improved readiness Three additional rounds followed the 1988 round of infrastructure reductions in 1991 1993 and 1995 Since then no further rounds of base closures and realignments have been authorised by Congress despite repeated requests from the Department of Defense in recent years for two additional rounds

The reasons for congressional resistance are two fold First there is concern over a likely backlash from constituents living in or near military installations Second many Members of Congress remain wary about a repetition of the perceived political intrusion by the Clinton Administration that occurred in regard to the 1995 recommendations to close Kelly and McClellan air force bases This book reveals the tension in the military facilities that may yet again be up for closure Also discussed are the issues members of Congress feel need be answered before conducting a new round of base closures when the national security environment is uncertain

Military bases : status of prior base realignment and closure rounds : report to the Honorable John E. Sununu, House of Representatives , Local Economy, Environment, and Intergovernmental Cooperation United States. Congress. House. Committee on Government Reform. Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management, and Intergovernmental Relations,2002

Sustainable Regeneration of Former Military Sites Samer Bagaeen,Celia Clark,2016-06-10 Sustainable Regeneration of Former Military Sites is the first book to analyze a profound land use change happening all over the world the search for sustainable futures for property formerly dedicated to national defense now becoming redundant disposed of and redeveloped The new military necessity for rapid flexible response requires quite different physical resources from the massive fixed positions of the Cold War with huge tracts of land and buildings looking for new uses The transition from military to civilian life for these complex contaminated isolated heritage laden and often contested sites in locations ranging from urban to remote is far from easy There is very little systematic analysis of what follows base closures leaving communities governments developers and planners experimenting with untested land use configurations partnership structures and financing strategies With twelve case studies drawn from different countries many written by those involved Sustainable Regeneration of Former Military Sites enables the diverse stakeholders in these projects to discover unique opportunities for reuse and learn from others experiences of successful regeneration

Social Coordination and Public Policy Gavin Roberts,Brianne Wolf,Roberta Herzberg,2023-01-09 This volume explores both in theory and in practice what social coordination is and how public policies can help or hinder the processes of social coordination In particular these chapters examine the institutional incentives that motivate public policy decisions and their implementation to achieve specific individual and social goals Some chapters in this volume are more theoretical applying insights from the Austrian Virginia and Bloomington schools of political economy to public policy issues Other chapters are more practical exploring the broader implications of these theories to real world public policy puzzles Authored by individuals from a variety of disciplines with diverse interests in public policy this work includes discussions of topics such as environmental policy housing policy and education policy among others A unifying theme across the chapters is that policymakers often advise one size fits all solutions to complicated public policy questions but ignore the multitude of incentives faced by the players of the game and the subsequent development of diverse forms of social coordination Social coordination is often left out public policy analysis but is crucial to the success of informal and formal institutional arrangements The chapters aim to disentangle these issues of social coordination in public policy in theory and practice
