Schofield, 1997 The papers in this volume provide a comprehensive account of the current methods and work in geostatistics including recent theoretical developments and applications Topics featured include stochastic simulations space time modelling and Bayesian framework Geostatistics Wollongong' 96 E. Y. Baafi, N.A. Schofield, 2012-11-06 In diamond alluvial deposits the information about the spatial distribution of stone size is of crucial importance for the quantitative characterisation of the different areas of the deposit In fact the value of the diamond reserves depends strongly on the distribution of stone sizes between two areas with the same grade the most valuable is the one with larger stones The geological genesis of the mineralization related with the transport and deposition of stones in trapsites can create separated spatial areas corresponding to different stone size To characterise these distinct areas the non smooth transitions between them should be accounted for in the estimation of internal properties An extended version of zonal control of geostatistical estimation Soares et al 1995 proposed in this paper aims to characterising the classes of size histogram for each geological unit avoiding the smooth effect For this purpose the morphology of each geological unit is obtained by using two distinct criteria i first the points of each unit are classified according to the local and global probabilities of belonging to each unit Soares 1992 ii in a second classification the optimization technique of Simulated Annealing is used to rearrange the pre classified points in order to impose in the final morphological maps the spatial variability of experimental samples Goovaerts 1994 A case study of a diamond alluvial deposit with two geological units with distinct stone size histograms is presented The AusIMM Bulletin, 1997 geoENV I — Geostatistics for Environmental Applications A.O. Soares, Jaime Gómez-Hernández, Roland Froidevaux, 2013-06-29 GeoENV96 the First European Conference on Geostatistics for Environmental Applications held in Lisbon was conceived to bring together researchers mostly from but not limited to Europe working on environmental issues approached by geostatistical methods Papers were attracted from fields as diverse as hydrogeology biology soil sciences air pollution or ecology It is clear that there is a lot of activity on geostatistics for environmental applications as the collection of papers in this book reveals GeoENV96 was successful in the number and quality of the papers presented which surpassed the initial expectations There is still a large dispersion on the level of application of geostatistics in the different areas To help in spreading the most novel applications of geostatistics across disciplines and to discuss the specific problems related to the application of geostatistics to environmental applications geoENV96 is intended to set the pace and to be the first of a series of biennial meetings The pace is set now let us wait for geoENV98 Lisbon November 1996 The Executive Committee Jaime Gomez Hernandez Roland Froidevaux Amflcar
