Geriatric Nursing Assistant:

Geriatric Nursing Assistants George H. Weber, 1990-10-17 This up to date bibliography of heretofore scattered references to nursing assistants includes literature pertinent to the construction of models to improve nursing assistant practice and emphasizes the psychosocial skills that are invaluable to the nursing assistant's work. Annotated reviews center on the tasks and context of nursing assistant work and ways to improve practice through training, organizational development, advocacy and bargaining. Additional chapters present a tentative psychosocial model of nursing assistant practice, offer six intervention models and investigate ways of further developing the nursing assistant occupation. Very highly recommended. Choice. The role of the nursing home has expanded in the late twentieth century due to both the growing percentage of elderly in the U.S. population and to society's tendency to over institutionalize people. In recent years the kinds and quality of care given to the elderly in nursing homes have received intense scrutiny. This timely bibliography focuses on nursing assistants, the personnel who are with the elderly around the clock doing a variety of tasks ranging from helping them with basic functions to comforting them during periods of distress. Nursing assistants provide as much as 90 percent of the direct care received by the elderly in the nursing home setting. Emphasizing the psychosocial skills that make the nursing assistant's job so important to the well being of nursing home residents, Geriatric Nursing Assistants collects and annotates the heretofore scattered references to nursing assistants and includes literature pertinent to the construction of models that improve nursing assistant practice. The first four chapters present the annotated reviews which are organized in anticipation of the practice enhancement models discussed in Chapter Six. These reviews center on the tasks and context of the nursing assistant's work and on ways to improve practice through training, organizational development, advocacy and bargaining. Chapter Five offers a tentative psychosocial concept of nursing assistant practice that requires further development, detailing the various resident psychosocial circumstances to which the nursing assistant might respond helpfully and the kinds of interventions and techniques which the nursing assistant might attempt. In Chapter Six, intervention models on inservice training, organizational development, advocacy and bargaining are presented in ideal, typical forms that recognize the limitations of daily practice; also, these models emphasize rigorous practice and its evaluation. Activities necessary to further develop the nursing assistant occupation, including political action, are investigated in Chapter Seven, which also considers the moral aspects of a progressive agenda for nursing assistants. This reference seeks to improve services to nursing home residents and represents a valuable practical contribution to the geriatric field. It will be useful to nursing home administrators and directors of nursing homes who must address ways to improve the working conditions of nursing assistants; to academicians in their research, training and advocacy efforts; and to the training directors and supervisors in the field who can directly aid nursing assistants in the acquisition of needed knowledge and skills. Geriatric Nursing Assistant Dorothy M. Dorothy M. Witmer,1986     Geriatrics Models of Care Michael L. Malone,Marie Boltz,Jonny Macias Tejada,Heidi White,2024-05-30 Following the success of the previous edition the second edition of Geriatrics Models of Care is the definitive resource for systems based practice improvement for the care of older adults Several new models of care have been published in the last eight years new outcomes have emerged to better understand the impact of existing models and with the rise of the Age Friendly Health Systems movement promoting organized efforts to prepare our health care settings for older individuals is of more importance than ever The second edition is organized based on the practice setting along a continuum of care hospital transitions from hospital to home outpatient settings and the emergency department This book also highlights long term care models which is an important part of the continuum of care for older Americans Further this edition features models that address the needs of vulnerable populations This new section will describe a spectrum of programs for older adults who have Alzheimer s disease or Parkinson s disease Other models describe best practices for older adults undergoing surgery or those who want to remain functioning independently in their home A defining feature of this book is that each chapter follows a standard template 1 the challenge which led to the model 2 the patient population served 3 core components of the intervention 4 the role of interdisciplinary health professionals 5 evidence to support the intervention 6 lessons learned in the implementation and dissemination of the model 7 implications for family caregivers and communities particularly underserved and diverse communities and 8 how each model will provide care across the continuum during an entire episode of care In addition each chapter features a call out box with practical tips for implementing the model     Communication in Elderly Care Peter Backhaus,2011-06-09 The topic of communication in elderly care is becoming ever more pressing with an aging world population and burgeoning numbers of people needing care This book looks at this critical but underanalyzed area It examines the way people talk to each other in eldercare settings from an interdisciplinary and globally cross cultural perspective The small body of available research points to eldercare communication taking place with its own specific conditions and contexts Often there is the presence of various mental physical ailments on the part of the care receivers scarcity of time resources and or flexibility on the part of the care givers and a mutual necessity of providing receiving assistance with intimate personal activities The book combines theory and practice with linguistically informed analysis of real life interaction in eldercare settings across the world Each chapter closes with a Practical Recommendations section that contains suggestions on how communication in eldercare can be improved This book is an important and timely publication that will appeal to researchers and carers alike
