

Advance praise for
THE GERMAN ARMY LEAGUE

"Coetzee shows that the Army League, founded in 1912, was the last in a chain of patriotic societies in pre-World War I Germany, created to combat socialism and pacifism, as well as to prepare society for what the founders of the patriotic associations felt was an inevitable armed conflict with the enemies of Germany. An original work. . . . A valuable addition to a much debated period."

István Deák
Columbia University

"Marilyn Shevin Coetzee's careful study of the German Army League sheds new light on political life during the final years of the Second Empire. By carefully examining the League's social composition and regional distribution, she contributes to our understanding of nationalism's strengths and limitations as a political force."
