other volumes Holistic Anthropology David Parkin, Stanley Ulijaszek, 2011 Given the broad reach of anthropology as the science of humankind there are times when the subject fragments into specialisms and times when there is rapprochement. Rather than just seeing them as reactions to each other it is perhaps better to say that both tendencies co exist and that it is very much a matter of perspective as to which is dominant at any moment. The perspective adopted by the contributors to this volume is that some anthropologists have over the last decade or so been paying considerable attention to developments in the study of social and biological evolution and of material culture and that this has brought social material cultural and biological anthropologists closer to each other and closer to allied disciplines such as archaeology and psychology. A more eclectic anthropology once characteristic of an earlier age is thus re emerging. The new holism does not result from the merging of sharply distinguished disciplines but from among anthropologists themselves who see social organization as fundamentally a problem of human ecology and from that of material and mental creativity human biology and the co evolution of society and culture. It is part of a wider interest beyond anthropology in the origins and rationale of human activities claims and beliefs and draws on inferential or speculative reasoning as well as hard evidence. The book argues that while usefully borrowing from other subjects all such reasoning must be grounded in prolonged intensive and linguistically informed fieldwork and comparison.
