

FOUNDATIONS OF A SUCCESSFUL WELLNESS PROGRAM

LISTEN TO WHAT EMPLOYEES NEED AND WANT

Your wellness program won't engage employees if it doesn't align with their needs and wants. Communicate with employees to understand what they are looking for and what they are interested in. Also, ensure that your program suits your culture and workplace dynamics.

LAYER INFO & ACTIVITIES TO IMPROVE PROGRAM REACH

To engage as many people as possible, ensure at least 80% of your initiatives are accessible by 100% of your population. Everyone learns differently, so multiple touchpoints are important! Share information through newsletters, health fairs, and workshops. Offer various activities like challenges, recipe demos, and one-on-one coaching.

BRING IN COMMUNITY RESOURCES

Leverage resources within the community. Invite local wellness professionals in for demos and workshops or host health fairs. This helps employees see what's available to them within their community. It may also encourage them to bring wellness information home to their families.

GET LEADERSHIP ON BOARD (ESPECIALLY MIDDLE MANAGERS)

Management participation encourages employees to do the same. Middle managers can be the most difficult to engage, but strive to involve them on some level as they are closest to the employee. Leader involvement shows that they believe in the program and that health and wellness are important.

INCLUDE INITIATIVES THAT MAKE WELLNESS FUN

Workshops, newsletters and posters are great, but it's not just about sharing information. Include activities that employees will enjoy: food demos, team challenges, office yoga. If they are fun, employees are more likely to participate. If they get involved, they'll be exposed to ideas they can implement into their lives.

FACILITATE CHANGE THROUGH SMALL STEPS

Help employees understand how to make choices healthier rather than expecting drastic changes to their lifestyles. Health coaching can help employees adapt existing habits and make small, simple changes. This will lead to more success.
