Katharina Niciejewska, 2015-02-01 This book examines the characteristics of equity trading and especially two relatively new phenomena which are dark pools and flash trading Over the last years these two terms became more and more important in equity trading and today they are a real alternative to traditional exchanges like the New York Stock Exchange or Deutsche Borse But these new evolutions do not only have advantages Indeed there are concerns that beside the benefits like fast execution times sophisticated techniques and less market impact these mechanisms can also burrow risks These risks are difficult to estimate with an evolution of these new platforms that was so quick that one might have the impression that even regulators do not full yet understand what might happen in the case of a next financial crisis However with a market share of 15% 20% of all trading activity in global equities and a jump of almost fivefold in the period of time from January to October 2009 these new mechanisms cannot be ignored anymore Therefore this book explains in detail the functionality of dark pools and other current trading strategies All important factors like different market structures market liquidity aspects as well as regulatory framework and technology facets will be reviewed Further an outlook should be given to the reader on how the evolution of dark pools co might continue in the coming years With dark pools and flash trading trading is now dominated by rapid fire computer systems that might create a more technically driven market rather than one based on fundamental forces It remains to see whether this evolution will continue Report ,1961 Nature Sir Norman Lockyer, 1899 The Observatory ,1889 A review of astronomy varies Evoked Potential Manual E. Colon, S.L. Visser, 2012-12-06 Evoked potentials are potentials that are derived from the peripheral or central nervous system They are time locked with an external stimulus and can be influenced by subjective intentions Evoked potentials have become increasingly popular for clinical diagnosis over the last few years Evoked potentials from the visual system are used by ophthalmologists in order to localize the abnormalities in the visual pathway The otologists are mainly involved in brainstem auditory evoked potentials while the pediatricians neonatologists neurologists and clinical neurophysiologists make use of multimodal stimulation The psychiatrists and psychologists generally examine the slow potentials such as P300 and CNV Anesthesiologists use short latency somatosensory and visual evoked potentials in order to monitor the effectiveness of the anesthesia Pharmacological evoked potentials are very promising measures for the quantification of the effectiveness of drug action on the cerebral cortex Urologists are more and more involved in pudendal somatosensory evoked potentials and in the intensive care unit evoked potentials are used in order to monitor the functional state of the central nervous system of the patient This overwhelming number of examinations and examinations clearly demonstrates the need for guidelines and standardization of the methods used The evoked potential methodology is restricted by the relative poor signal to noise ratio In many diseases this signal to noise ratio decrease rapidly during the progression of the illness Optimal technical equipment and methodology are therefore essential
