The Making of Barbarians Haun Saussy, 2024-12-17 A groundbreaking account of translation and identity in the Chinese literary tradition before 1850 with important ramifications for today Debates on the canon multiculturalism and world literature often take Eurocentrism as the target of their critique But literature is a universe with many centers and one of them is China The Making of Barbarians offers an account of world literature in which China as center produces its own margins Here Sinologist and comparatist Haun Saussy investigates the meanings of literary translation adaptation and appropriation on the boundaries of China long before it came into sustained contact with the West When scholars talk about comparative literature in Asia they tend to focus on translation between European languages and Chinese Korean and Japanese as practiced since about 1900 In contrast Saussy focuses on the period before 1850 when the translation of foreign works into Chinese was rare because Chinese literary tradition overshadowed those around it The Making of Barbarians looks closely at literary works that were translated into Chinese from foreign languages or resulted from contact with alien peoples The book explores why translation was such an undervalued practice in premodern China and how this vast and prestigious culture dealt with those outside it before a new group of foreigners Europeans appeared on the horizon

Murray, 2007-01-31 Mirror of Morality takes an interdisciplinary look at an important form of pictorial art produced during two millennia of Chinese imperial rule Ideas about individual morality and state ideology were based on the ancient teachings of Confucius with modifications by later interpreters and government institutions Throughout the imperial period members of the elite made sponsored and inscribed or used illustrations of themes taken from history literature and recent events to promote desired conduct among various social groups This dimension of Chinese art history has never before been broadly covered or investigated in historical context The first half of the study examines the nature of narrative illustration in China and traces the evolution of its functions conventions and rhetorical strategies from the second century BCE through the eleventh century Under the stimulus of Buddhism sophisticated techniques developed for representing stories in visual form While tracing changes in the social functions and cultural positions of narrative illustration the second half of the book argues that narrative illustration continued to play a vital role in elite visual culture
