Family, Self, and Society Philip A. Cowan, Dorothy Field, Donald A. Hansen, Arlene Skolnick, Guy E. Swanson, 2014-05-22 Any agenda for family research in the 1990s must take seriously a contextual approach to the study of family relationships The editors and contributors to this volume believe that the richness in family studies over the next decade will come from considering the diversity of family forms different ethnic groups and cultures different stages of family life as well as different historical cohorts Their goal is to make more explicit how we think about families in order to study them and understand them To illustrate the need for diversity in family studies examples are presented from new and old families majority and minority families American and Japanese families and intact and divorcing families This variety is intended to push the limits of current thinking not only for researchers but also for all who are struggling to live with and work with families in a time when family life is valued but fragmented and relatively unsupported by society's institutions. Students and researchers interested in family development from the viewpoint of any of the social sciences will find this book of value.

Con Respeto Guadalupe Valdes, 1996. Con Respeto presents a study of ten Mexican immigrant families with a special focus on mothers that describes how such families go about the business of surviving and learning to succeed in a new world. Guadalupe Valdes examines what appears to be a lack of interest in education by Mexican parents and shows through extensive quotations and numerous anecdotes that these families are both rich and strong in family values and that they bring with them clear views of what constitutes success and failure. The book's conclusion questions the merit of typical family intervention programs designed to promote school success and suggests that these interventions because they do not genuinely respect the values of diverse families may have long term negative consequences for children. Con Respeto will be a valuable resource in graduate courses in foundations, ethnographic research, sociology and anthropology of education, multicultural education and child development and will be of particular interest to professors and researchers of multicultural education, bilingual education, ethnographic research methods and sociology and anthropology of education. This rich and absorbing study of Mexican parents in border communities leads to more complex rather than single minded solutions to school success. Valdes sees to the center of things and deftly questions the merit of typical educational interventions aimed at promoting school success; these interventions grounded in mainstream values do more harm than good. They do not show respect for deeply ingrained familistic values, the cultural capital that immigrant parents bring with them on their backs and in their hearts from their homeland and they devalue the social and linguistic competence of immigrant parents and their children. Valdes does not provide solutions. She does however lead the search with her strong but cautious narrative voice for a sufficiently complex and multi leveled understanding of the challenges facing families who move across borders as immigrants.

Understanding Processes of Ethnic Concentration and Dispersal Jennifer McGarrigle, 2025-10-01. Questions surrounding race as a spatial divider have come to the forefront of the political agenda compelling us to revisit the debate on residential segregation. Drawing on the spatial analysis of changing dynamics in the ethnic geography of Greater Glasgow and qualitative research on the residential preferences of 40 South Asian households, this book enhances our understanding of settlement in the city. Understanding Processes of Ethnic Concentration and Dispersal documents new residential patterns including South Asian suburbanisation in traditionally white areas. Processes underlying both the changes and signs of sustained ethnic concentration are shown to be dynamic and complex. They encompass elements of choice, constraint and negotiations between the two while also revealing a remarkable array of differentials such as class, status, education, age and culture.
