Everybody Else Sarah Potter, 2014-03-15

In the popular imagination the twenty years after World War II are associated with simpler happier more family focused living We think of stereotypical baby boom families like the Cleavers white suburban and well on their way to middle class affluence For these couples and their children a happy stable family life provided an antidote to the anxieties and uncertainties of the emerging nuclear age But not everyone looked or lived like the Cleavers For those who could not have children or have as many children as they wanted the postwar baby boom proved a source of social stigma and personal pain Further in 1950 roughly one in three Americans made below middle class incomes and over fifteen million lived under Jim Crow segregation For these individuals home life was not an oasis but a challenge intimately connected to the era s many political and social upheavals Everybody Else provides a comparative analysis of diverse postwar families and examines the lives and case records of men and women who applied to adopt or provide pre adoptive foster care in the 1940s and 1950s It considers an array of individuals both black and white middle and working class who found themselves on the margins of a social world that privileged family membership These couples wanted adoptive and foster children in order to achieve a sense of personal mission and meaning as well as a deeper feeling of belonging to their communities But their quest for parenthood also highlighted the many inequities of that era These individuals experiences seeking children reveal that the baby boom family was about much more than togetherness or a quiet house in the suburbs it also shaped people s ideas about the promises and perils of getting ahead in postwar America

Women, Islam and Modernity Linda Rae Bennett, 2005-03-31 In popular debates about reproductive and sexual rights formal religions especially Islam are seen as barriers providing institutional and ideological resistance to women s realization of reproductive and social autonomy This book challenges this simplified view of Islam Based on original fieldwork in Eastern Indonesia the book explores the complex factors that affect how young Indonesian women form their sexual subjectivities discusses the cultural and historical conditions under which single Muslim women repress or express their sexuality and examines how the cultural context including other factors besides Islam simultaneously influence the ways in which young single women approach courtship and issues of sexuality and reproductive health It demonstrates that Islam is neither alone in trying to control female sexuality nor entirely successful in doing so comfort and hope in times of suffering Hollywood's Italian American Filmmakers Jonathan J. Cavallero, 2011-05-01

Hollywood's Italian American Filmmakers explores the different ways in which Italian American directors from the 1920s to the present have responded to their ethnicity. While some directors have used film to declare their ethnic roots and create an Italian American imagined community, others have ignored or even denied their background. Jonathan J. Cavallero examines the films of Frank Capra, Martin Scorsese, Nancy Savoca, Francis Ford Coppola, and Quentin Tarantino with a focus on what the films reveal about each director's view on Italian American identities. Whereas Capra's films highlight similarities between immigrant characters and WASP Americans, Scorsese accepts his ethnic heritage but also sees it as confining. Similarly, many of Coppola's films provide a nostalgic treatment of Italian American identity but with little criticism of the culture's more negative aspects. And while Savoca's movies reveal her artful ability to recognize how ethnic, gender, and class identities overlap, Tarantino's films exhibit a playfully postmodern engagement with Italian American ethnicity. Cavallero's exploration of the films of Capra, Scorsese, Savoca, Coppola, and Tarantino demonstrates how immigrant Italians fought prejudice, how later generations positioned themselves in relation to their predecessors, and how the American cinema, usually seen as a cultural institution that works to assimilate, has also served as a forum where assimilation was resisted.
