Famine And Hunger:

Mass Starvation Alex de Waal, 2017-12-08 The world almost conquered famine Until the 1980s this scourge killed ten million people every decade but by early 2000s mass starvation had all but disappeared Today famines are resurgent driven by war blockade hostility to humanitarian principles and a volatile global economy In Mass Starvation world renowned expert on humanitarian crisis and response Alex de Waal provides an authoritative history of modern famines their causes dimensions and why they ended He analyses starvation as a crime and breaks new ground in examining forced starvation as an instrument of genocide and war Refuting the enduring but erroneous view that attributes famine to overpopulation and natural disaster he shows how political decision or political failing is an essential element in every famine while the spread of democracy and human rights and the ending of wars were major factors in the near ending of this devastating phenomenon Hard hitting and deeply informed Mass Starvation explains why man made famine and the political decisions that could end it for good must once again become a top priority for the international community Food and Famine in the 21st Century William A. Dando, 2012-02-13 This comprehensive two volume encyclopedia examines specific famines throughout history and contains entries on key topics related to food production security and policies and famine giving readers an in depth look at food crises and their causes responses to them and outcomes Famines have claimed more lives across human history than all the wars ever fought This two volume set represents the most comprehensive study of food and famine currently available providing the broadest analysis of hunger and famine causes as well as a detailed examination of the ramifications of cultural and natural hazards upon famine Volume one focuses upon 50 topics and issues relating to the creation of hunger and famines in the world from 4000 BCE to 2100 including an overview of how agriculture has evolved from primitive hunting and gathering that supported limited numbers of people to a worldwide system that now feeds over seven billion people Volume two entitled Classic Famines begins with famines of the past from 4000 BCE to 2100 CE includes ten classic famine case studies and concludes with predictions of famines we could see in the 21st century and beyond Hunger John R. Understanding the Causes of Hunger and Disease in Sub-Saharan Africa Marc Bonenberger,2015-02-09 Seminar paper from the year 2009 in the subject Medicine Epidemiology grade 1 0 University of Basel Centre for African Studies Basel course Seminar Current Ecological and Health Issues language English abstract Despite the fact that there is currently enough food in the world for all the poorest billion of the world s population is suffering from starvation and hunger related diseases It was estimated that in the 20th century between 70 and 80 million people died in famines worldwide of which 4 million famine deaths occurred in Africa Even though the last two decades saw a reduction in famines in other parts of the world on the African continent it is still a sad reality There are numerous factors causing a famine most importantly natural disasters policy failures conflicts and wars production and market failures In most cases it is not a single factor triggering a famine but it is rather the result of interlocking processes The overall research question of this paper is How are famines caused what effects do they have on human health and what are the chances to reduce poverty and hunger in Africa This research question is answered in three chapters The first chapter is an attempt to explain the causes of famines by using the Panarchy Framework as developed by Gunderson and Holling in 2002 In the second chapter the relationship between hunger undernutrition and both communicable and non communicable diseases is explored This includes an analysis on how undernutrition is measured and which relief practices in emergency situations are usually being applied In the third chapter the strategies needed to meet the extreme poverty and hunger Millennium Development Goal are explored As there are a number of threats endangering the achievement of this goal in a second part of this chapter the main threats are identified to deliberate about whether or not this goal may be achieved in Africa
