

As soon as I saw this book, I wished I had written it myself. It is a marvellous idea, beautifully presented. Desmond Dixon has given himself the intriguing task of contemplating a future evolution on our own planet, closely based on species that exist at present. By using a time-ward and eliminating today's dominant species, including man, he has been able to watch, through his mind's eye, the lesser animals gradually taking over as the major occupants of the earth's surface.

Setting his scenario in the distant future, about 10 million years from now, he has given the members of his new animal kingdom time to undergo dramatic changes in structure and behaviour. But in doing this he has never allowed himself to become too indulgent in his imagination. He has created his fauna of the future as persuasively that each kind of animal touches us as an important lesson about the known processes of past evolution. By introducing us to fictitious examples of these factual processes, he has a not only great fun to read, but also has real scientific value.
