Trauma Novels in Postcolonial Literatures: Tsitsi Dangarembga, Nervous Conditions, and Tomson Highway, Kiss of the Fur Queen

Milena Bubenechik, 2012-12-03 Inhaltsangabe Introduction This study will depict the traumatic condition of the formerly colonised indigenous peoples of Africa and Canada The postcolonial trauma novels Tomson Highway s Kiss of the Fur Queen 1998 and Tsitsi Dangarembga s Nervous Conditions 1988 are first hand accounts of colonial experience under the governance of the British Empire of the second half of the twentieth century The semi autobiographical novels bring up the voices of the formerly silenced natives and are pioneering accounts of the native perception of Western intrusion The narratives portray the upsetting experiences of the era of colonisation and explore the insidious consequences of living in the midst of historical change The novels written in English speak back to the canon and expose the suffering of its subjects They depict the grim atmosphere of the colonial project and show the effects of the domination oppression diaspora and discrimination suffered by the natives The novels are life narratives and as such reveal facts not recorded in history books The trauma novels enrich and challenge the discourse on post colonial trauma The native authors Dangarembga and Highway explore the questions of identity trauma and resistance in the context of colonization Their approach queries traditional notions of identity formation and the common understanding of trauma and trauma healing With their portrayal of unique means for resistance and survival the novelists offer a challenge to the existing beliefs and theories In the study of the novels Nervous Conditions and Kiss of the Fur Queen which allow silenced repressed individuals to speak out about the unspeakable events of their lives I will explore the formation of colonial and postcolonial identities the nature and impact of colonial trauma and the possibility of resistance on the side of the colonised I will work towards identifying the discrepancies between indigenous and Western notions of trauma and identity and study the challenges of postcolonial literatures I will explore the concept of cultural hybridity as presented in the novels and study the impact of trauma on identity construction In the process of this study I intend to find out to what extent trauma influences and shapes identity Moreover I will reconsider the Western notions of trauma and identity and examine their integrity in the colonial discourse With the help of the novels I will study the differences A Study of the Modern Novel

Kutch,2016-06-15 Novel Perspectives on German Language Comics Studies History Pedagogy Theory gathers an international team of contributors from two continents whose innovative scholarship demonstrates a regard for comics and graphic novels as works of art in their own right. The contributions serve as models for further research that will continue to define the relationship between comics and other traditional high art forms such as literature and the visual arts. Novel Perspectives on German Language Comics Studies is the first English language anthology that focuses exclusively on the graphic texts of German speaking countries. In its breadth this book functions as an important resource in a limited pool of critical works on German language comics and graphic novels. The individual chapters differ significantly from one another in methodology subject matter and style. Taken together however they present a cross section of comics and graphic novel scholarship being performed in North America and Europe today. Moreover they help to secure a place for these works in a globalized culture of comics. This volume's contributors have helped create a new critical language within which this rapidly expanding medium can be read and interpreted.

Charney and Nestler's Neurobiology of Mental Illness Dennis Charney, Eric Nestler, Joseph D. Buxbaum, Elisabeth B. Binder, Joshua A. Gordon, Marina R. Picciotto, 2025-01-03. The genetic investigation into mental illnesses has progressed rapidly since the mapping of the human genome. Driven by advances in genomic profiling technology massive genomic datasets are powering the discovery of genetic variation associated to complex traits including mental illness. From severe neurodevelopmental disorders to schizophrenia and depression genetic variation plays some role in risk. Critically most mental illnesses are complex multifactorial and the consequence of a combination of genetic and environmental influences. This chapter will introduce the genome its variation and the methods used to identify what variants and genes matter for mental illnesses.

Audiobooks, Literature, and Sound Studies Matthew Rubery,2011-05-09 This is the first scholarly work to examine the cultural significance of the talking book since the invention of the phonograph in 1877 the earliest machine to enable the reproduction of the human voice Recent advances in sound technology make this an opportune moment to reflect on the evolution of our reading practices since this remarkable invention Some questions addressed by the collection include How does auditory literature adapt printed texts What skills in close listening are necessary for its reception What are the social consequences of new listening technologies In sum the essays gathered together by this collection explore the extent to which the audiobook enables us not just to hear literature but to hear it in new ways Bringing together a set of reflections on the enrichments and impoverishments of the reading experience brought about by developments in sound technology this collection spans the earliest adaptations of printed texts into sound by Charles Dickens Thomas Hardy and other novelists from the late nineteenth century to recordings by contemporary figures such as Toni Morrison and Barack Obama at the turn of the twenty first century As the voices gathered here suggest it is time to give a hearing to one of the most talked about new media of the past century Bulletin of Spanish Studies ,1925 A.L.A.
