Silver Flagon Benjamin Leopold Farjeon,2020-09-28 It is December and the sun marks the record of a hundred and six in the shade We are at the golden end of the world in Australia at Silver Creek twelve months ago a wilderness now a busy and thriving township Within this brief space an infant in the history of cities has grown into what promises to become a strong and healthy man Unknown unthought of but a year ago the name of Silver Creek is already a household word in a new and flourishing colony and holds an important place in the journals of commerce There are turnings and thoroughfares in Silver Creek sufficiently irregular to drive land surveyors into a state of distraction and there is but one street which exhibits anything like regularity in its formation but this is a result more of accident than design It is the principal street in the township and is lined with wooden tenements and calico tents in which the business of the town is transacted Stores of every description in which all things necessary and many things unnecessary for the requirements of life are to be found within the limits of this thoroughfare which is known to the residents as High Street If you are curious in such matters you may calculate how many stores High Street contains by setting its length at a mile and a half and giving each store an average frontage of sixteen feet A few of the buildings are of wood the majority of calico and the inhabitants of one Englishman s castle can hear the inhabitants of the next talking and bargaining during the day and sighing and murmuring during the night Not that the inhabitants of Silver Creek are all Englishmen Other nations thirsting to have their fingers in the golden pie have sent their representatives across the seas and through the bush and Americans Germans Frenchmen Spaniards Italians Mongols and Africans form a rare Tower of Babel community As however they have all been drawn thither by one magnet fashioned of bright gold they do not emulate the Tower of Babel folk but hob a nob amicably with one another and make common cause of it with the ubiquitous Englishman The pie is a rich one but the fruit is unequally distributed and there are many waste places in it unfortunately not seen until the crust is dived into the discovery of which brings disappointment and despair to the hungry seekers The despair does not last long they are soon tearing up the earth again animated by new hopes of coming suddenly upon rich pockets of gold Objects and Materials Penny Harvey,Eleanor Conlin Casella,Gillian Evans,Hannah Knox,Christine McLean,Elizabeth B.
