Skills in the Age of Over-Qualification Caroline Lloyd, Jonathan Payne, 2016-10-27 Across the developed world most of us who work now earn our living in the service sector However the issue of what kind of service economy is sustainable and desirable both in economic and social terms is rarely debated This book argues that this needs to change National governments have emphasised the role of skills in achieving international competitiveness higher living standards and social inclusion However even prior to the 2008 financial crisis problems of over qualification skills wastage and poor job quality were becoming difficult to ignore This raises important questions about what kind of service sector jobs will be on offer to meet the aspirations of an increasingly qualified workforce and what role can governments play in raising the skills required in jobs and the quality of jobs and services Work organisation and job design are key factors shaping the skill content of work and the opportunities workers have to deploy their skills and capabilities Through cross national comparative research this book examines whether and why service sector jobs vary across countries Drawing upon detailed empirical research the jobs of vocational teacher fitness instructor and caf worker in the UK Norway and France are compared allowing an exploration of the role of national institutions sectors and organisations in shaping work organisation and job quality The findings contribute to the comparative study of work organisation the relationship between skills and performance the role and purpose of education and the prospects for better jobs in the age of over qualification

Where Bad Jobs Are Better Françoise Carré, Chris Tilly, 2017-11-16 Retail is now the largest employer in the United States For the most part retail jobs are bad jobs characterized by low wages unpredictable work schedules and few opportunities for advancement However labor experts Fran oise Carr and Chris Tilly show that these conditions are not inevitable In Where Bad Jobs Are Better they investigate retail work across different industries and seven countries to demonstrate that better retail jobs are not just possible but already exist By carefully analyzing the factors that lead to more desirable retail jobs Where Bad Jobs Are Better charts a path to improving job quality for all low wage jobs In surveying retail work across the United States Carr and Tilly find that the majority of retail workers receive low pay and nearly half work part time which contributes to high turnover and low productivity Jobs staffed predominantly by women such as grocery store cashiers pay even less than retail jobs in male dominated fields such as consumer electronics Yet when comparing these jobs to similar positions in Western Europe Carr and Tilly find surprising differences In France though supermarket cashiers perform essentially the same work as cashiers in the United States they receive higher pay are mostly full time and experience lower turnover and higher productivity And unlike the United States where many retail employees are subject to unpredictable schedules in Germany retailers are required by law to provide their employees notice of work schedules six months in advance The authors show that disparities in job quality are largely the result of differing social norms and national institutions For instance weak labor regulations and the decline of unions in the United States have enabled retailers to cut labor costs aggressively in ways that depress wages and discourage full time work On the other hand higher minimum wages greater government regulation of work schedules and stronger collective bargaining through unions and works councils have improved the quality of retail jobs in Europe As retail and service work continue to expand American employers and policymakers will have to decide the extent to which these jobs will be good or bad Where Bad Jobs Are Better shows how stronger rules and regulations can improve the lives of retail workers and boost the quality of low wage jobs across the board

Working Time Deborah M. Figart, Lonnie Golden, 2013-01-11 Working time is a crucial issue for both research and public policy This book presents the first comprehensive analysis of both paid and unpaid work time integrating a unique discussion of overwork underwork shortening of the working week and flexible work practices Time at work is affected by a complex web of evolving culture and social relations as well as market technological and macroeconomic forces and institutions such as collective bargaining and government policy Using a variety of new data sources the authors review the latest trends on working time in numerous countries

European Employment Models in Flux G. Bosch, S. Lehmendorff, J. Rubery, 2009-03-31 A new contribution to the debate on the evolution of European employment and social models These models need to adjust to meet new challenges including globalization ageing societies and new governance approaches at national EU and international level This book explores these issues through the experiences of nine EU countries
