Leadership in the Global Business Environment - Unwrapping the Japanese Approach Robert Karaszewski, 2008 Various analyses of factors that have contributed to the success or failure of economic organizations institutions and even of whole social structures usually lead to those persons who are at the top Regardless of the character specific context and organization type the results gained are primarily due to these leaders A able observer while looking at children s way of acting and while studying their behaviour is able to comment shrewdly on their characters views and hierarchy of values as well as on the rules adopted and behaviour reinforced at their homes Likewise from observing employees conduct one can infer a great deal about those persons in the top level of management who are responsible for creating the vision and the organizational culture I have had the opportunity to see the functioning of various companies on five continents and I have always found it fascinating how the personality qualifications possessed and values shared by leaders influence their action and the long term expansion of their companies Also my interests over many years and my research in the area of building quality in a total dimension have led me to focus on the problem of the kind of leadership that forms one of the pillars of TQM This subject appears to be especially interesting also due to its surprisingly holistic character It is pursued by various economists political scientists sociologists psychologists and even by philosophers employees at all levels into strategic thinkers Naturally leaders assumed all this strategizing would pay off And yet for too many organizations the promised results never came to pass Quite simply they couldn't execute Now the business world has shifted its focus to the consistent delivery of results If an organization can't execute its plans and initiatives nothing else matters not the most solid well thought out strategy not the most innovative business model not even technological breakthroughs that could transform an industry As it turns out the conventional wisdom about what it takes to implement strategy and deliver results isn't all that wise So what really differentiates the companies that are able to get things done day to day and deliver consistent results The answer is found in the pages of Richard Lepsinger's ground breaking book Closing the Execution Gap Based on extensive research and years of practical experience the book outlines five prerequisites for effective execution and five Bridges that differentiate companies that do it best It also describes six Bridge Builders leaders at all levels can use to close the execution gap in their company or team and help people get things done Specifically it addresses What really gets in the way of getting things done for individuals teams and entire companies What leaders can do to enhance their organization's ability to close the execution gap and achieve solid business results What it takes to consistently execute plans and initiatives at a day to day operational level The book features many case studies of companies that have a track record of effective execution Hewlett Packard Costco Procter Gamble and those who have struggled with closing the gap between creating a vision and delivering results Dell American Airlines GM As the business world becomes more competitive and less forgiving execution matters more than ever This is a book for the times we live in and one that for many companies could mean the difference between success and failure
