African Environmental and Human Security in the 21st Century Helen E. Purkitt, 2014-05-14

Environmental and human security issues are vital national security interests in African states because most citizens are engaged in daily struggles to survive Chronic and worsening resource scarcities and degradations fuel these individual struggles along with political conflicts among different groups vying to control and benefit from scarce resources Thus many observers agree on the importance of expanding the concept of national security in African states but there is no consensus yet on the optimal approach for studying or improving environmental and human security problems While there are books on human and environmental security few past works focus on Africa or address the interests and concerns of researchers and practitioners working in such diverse fields as development security or environmental science Even though the military is one of the most influential institutions in African countries no published work to date has addressed issues related to when how or if national and foreign militaries should be involved in promoting human and environmental security African Environmental and Human Security in the 21st Century fills this void by combining ten original studies that discuss important non traditional security issues facing countries located in each region of Africa This volume reflects a shared assumption that one must have case specific knowledge use multidisciplinary and multi level conceptual frameworks and have an appreciation of feasible and desirable public policies in order to understand and effectively address complex non traditional security concerns This is the first book to address a broad array of African environmental and human security issues The book is intended to be used by beginning students seasoned researchers novice and experienced practitioners The case studies expose the reader to past relevant research while also identifying the main causes and consequences of different types of political conflicts fueled by human and environmental security problems Each study also contains policy lessons best practices or recommended future actions The originality and comprehensiveness of each chapter means that the volume is likely to appeal to a wide range of readers for many years Despite the diversity of the contributors backgrounds many of the conclusions and recommendations use common themes about the complex causes of human and environmental conflicts the need to adopt longer term time frames to evaluate the effectiveness of policy actions and an emphasis on the importance of outside actors providing modest amounts of targeted aid to help Africans manage immediate pressing problems as well Several authors addressed the proper role for outside agencies such as AFRICOM and USAID and provide caveats similar to the thrust of Maxie McFarland's cautionary concluding comments at the ISA panel to wit just because the military is already doing a lot of nontraditional human security type projects in Iraq and Afghanistan and just because the Army and other branches of the military can do this type of activity doesn't mean you want them to do it African Environmental and Human Security in the 21st Century is an important book for African Studies economic development environmental and earth science environmental security ecotourism history human security international relations national security and military Science Collections

Bibliographic Guide to Law, 1988 Environmental Change and Human Security in Africa and the Middle East Mohamed Behnassi, Katriona McGlade, 2017-01-17 This volume brings together insights on the interactions between environmental change and human security in the Middle East and Africa These regions face particular challenges in relation to environmental degradation the decline of natural resources and consequent risks to current and future human security The chapters provide topical analysis from a range of disciplines on the theory discourse policy and practice of responding to global environmental change and threats to human security Case studies from Morocco Tunisia Egypt Turkey Iraq and Syria provide empirical evidence with a focus section dedicated to the critical issue of water resources and water security in the region The contributions demonstrate above all that the risks posed to human security arise through multiple and interconnected processes operating across diverse spatial and temporal scales The complexity of these processes requires new ways of thinking and intervening As a contribution the current volume provides engaging insights from theory and practice for those seeking to address the challenges of environmental change

African Environmental and Human Security in the 21st Century Helen E. Purkitt, 2009 The New York Times Index, 1982 The Violence of Conservation in Africa

Ramutsindela, Maano, Matose, Frank, Mushonga, Tafadzwa, 2022-01-11 Offering insights on violence in conservation this timely book demonstrates how and why the state in Africa pursues conservation objectives to the detriment of its citizens. It focuses on how the dehumanization of black people and indigenous groups, the insertion of global green agendas onto the continent, a lack of resource sovereignty and neoliberal conservation account for why violence is a permanent feature of conservation in Africa.

The Green State in Africa Carl Death, 2016-09-27 A provocative reassessment of the relationship between states and environmental politics in Africa. From climate related risks such as crop failure and famine to longer term concerns about sustainable urbanization, environmental justice and biodiversity conservation, African states face a range of environmental issues. As Carl Death demonstrates, the ways in which they are addressing them have important political ramifications and challenge current understandings of green politics. Death draws on almost a decade of research to reveal how central African environmental politics are to the transformation of African states.

Environmental Politics and Liberation in Contemporary Africa Mohamed Salih, 2014-03-14 Nowadays the environment looms large in the analysis of conflict in developing societies and the precise role it plays is the subject of an ongoing debate. The debate has moved on from the earlier but still popular notions of power struggles, class struggles and ethnic conflicts to a perception of conflict as the product of intense group competition for resources. Where the state controls the distribution of resources, itself inevitably becomes party to conflicts whose bone of contention is access to state power as the most efficient means of gaining access to resources. The resources in question are social, health, education, transportation, communication, recreation, etc. and material, land, water, housing, jobs, contracts, licenses, permits, etc. In parts of the world and especially in Africa, diminishing resources and authoritarian state rule exacerbate group competition, leading to political confrontation. This is the line I have followed in analysing conflict in the Horn of Africa. Markakis 1987, 1998. Mohamed Salih's first contribution in this volume is to move the debate a step beyond this line, which can be criticized as unduly materialist. He does it by bringing culture into the realm of resources, not only as a resource in itself but also as the agency that assigns natural resources their value. Culture thus becomes a contextual element in conflict over resources whose value is culturally determined.

Who's who in America, 1995

Environmental Humanities of Extraction in Africa James Ogude, Tafadzwa Mushonga, 2022-08-17 This book brings together perspectives on resource exploitation to expose the continued environmental and socio-political concerns in post-colonial Africa. The continent is host to a myriad of environmental issues, largely resulting from its rich diversity of natural resources that have been historically subjected to exploitation. Colonial patterns of resource use and capital accumulation continue unabated, making environmental and related socio-political problems a dominant feature of African economies. The book pursues the manifestation of these problems through four themes: environmental justice, violent capitalocene, indigenous knowledge and climate change. The editors locate the book within the broad fields of political ecology and environmental geopolitics to highlight the intricate geographies of resource exploitation across Africa. It uniquely focuses on the socio political and geopolitical dynamics associated with the exploitation of Africa's natural resources and its people. The case studies from different parts of Africa tell a compelling story of resource exploitation related issues of environmental degradation in a continent particularly vulnerable to climate change and the continued plundering of its natural resources. The book will be of great interest to scholars and students from the interdisciplinary fields of the environmental humanities and environmental studies more broadly as well as those studying political ecology, environmental policy and natural resources with a specific focus on Africa.

Political Economy of Resource, Human Security and Environmental Conflicts in Africa Kelechi Johnmary Ani, Victor Ojakorotu, Kelvin Bribena, 2021. The book Political Economy of Resource Human Security and Environmental Conflicts In Africa is a masterpiece that accounts for the years of Western exploration of African resources as well as the economic and armed crisis that it has generated in the African continent. It is a wonderful learning resource for environmentalists, policy tool for African government and a rich source of knowledge. Dr Emmanuel Mutambara, Graduate School of Business Leadership, Westville Campus, Durban University of Kwa Zulu Natal, South Africa. This book has conceptualized the dynamics as well as complexities of resources, human security and conflicts in the African continent. The rich data collected by the writers in presenting their facts are overwhelming. It is a fantastic learning and intellectual enriching resource for global scholars that are conscious of African studies. Prof Romanus Ejiaga, Dean, Faculty of Humanities, Alex Ekwueme Federal University Ndufu Alike, Ikwo, Nigeria. This book shows the push and pull effects between resources, human security and conflicts in Africa. It recognizes the need for resources in Africa to be processed into finished goods in order to influence the global market and redefine the pattern of trade relations with powerful countries of Asia, America and Europe in shaping the destiny and future of African countries. The achievement of this laudable objective is plagued by the security challenges which are directly or indirectly linked to resource-related conflicts rocking most of the resource-endowed countries in the continent, thereby threatening global peace and security. To deal with this menace in the continent, it requires global co-operation and support of foreign governments, international organizations, international non-government organizations, governments of host countries and its citizens. The book presents the cases and experiences of countries that are endowed with resource as well as have experienced different forms of human insecurity and have witnessed environmental conflicts in its analysis, which make the discourse interesting and quite educating.
