First Nations people and People of Colour Exporting Press Freedom Craig LaMay, 2017-07-12 International media assistance is a small but important form of international democracy promotion aid Media assistance boomed after the 1989 transitions in Central Europe but now flows to virtually all regions of the world Today the media assistance industry is focused on the problem of sustainability How are free and independent public affairs media supposed to maintain their editorial mission while facing hostile political systems or the demands of the consumer marketplace Many media in developing countries have been or are grant dependent When grants are exhausted or withdrawn media that were funded to further democratic consolidation typically wither and die Some become mere grant chasers Others abandon public service to the demands of market competition or political patronage As a result governmental and non governmental grant makers now emphasize the need for sustainability in considering grants in the media sector Many grant recipients have grown frustrated sometimes bitter and have sought to take a much more active role in the way assistance programs are put together Just how is sustainability to be achieved while also ensuring a public service editorial mission Exporting Press Freedom examines the history and practice of media assistance and argues that the dilemma of media independence and sustainability is best understood as an economic problem rather than one of poor editorial standards or lack of will It includes profiles of news and public affairs media in developing and democratizing countries and also of two non governmental organizations that have pioneered the use of low interest loans in media assistance These profiles exemplify strategic and entrepreneurial approaches to developing and supporting public service media Such approaches may be of use not only in the developing world but in the consolidated Western democracies as well where concern has grown about poor journalistic performance and its consequences f Mainstream Shift Markers Emily Williams, AI, 2025-04-07 Mainstream Shift Markers explores the pivotal moments when mainstream publishing began embracing LGBTQ voices offering a historical analysis of this significant cultural shift The book argues that LGBTQ inclusion wasn't a smooth progression but a series of hard won battles shaped by activism shifting social norms and the commercial appeal of LGBTQ content For example the surge in AIDS literature during the 1980s and 1990s played a crucial role in bringing LGBTQ experiences to a wider audience The book examines the evolution of LGBTQ representation in publishing from subtle early depictions to the emergence of specialized LGBTQ presses and the subsequent mainstreaming of LGBTQ authors and stories It progresses chronologically delving into the impact of events like the Stonewall riots and significant legal decisions A key focus is on the publishing industry's role as a gatekeeper determining which stories are told and by whom while also addressing ongoing debates about authenticity and cultural appropriation Horror Literature: Stories, Themes, and Authors Pasquale De Marco, 2025-04-15 Embark on a chilling journey into the realm of horror literature with Horror Literature Stories Themes and Authors This comprehensive guide delves into the macabre unveiling the elements that make this genre so captivating and unsettling Within these pages you'll encounter a diverse cast of characters from the tormented protagonists who face their fears head on to the malevolent

Bates, 2023-12-20 Children and Adolescent's Experiences of Violence and Abuse at Home is a unique book that explores some of the main controversies and challenges within the field. The book is organised into three sections: the first covering work that has focused on the experiences of living in DV settings as a child or young person; the second offers overviews of the impact of child victimisation; and the final section is about working with children in practice and service-based settings. It includes extensive reviews of the literature, empirical research and practice observations, all of which provide compelling evidence of a need to change how we construct victims and design services. It provides evidence for the need to work sensitively, inclusively and responsively around issues of victim identification, support and prevention. Moreover, the evidence urges us to include children's and adult victim survivor's experiences and contributions in the creation of services. Concluding with a series of recommendations for both future research and ways in which we can help use the research findings to inform practice, it is a must-read for researchers, practitioners and educators working with children and young people within the field of domestic violence and abuse. It will also be of interest and value to policy makers who are reviewing legislation and those involved in commissioning psychological services and victim services that work with child and adolescent victims.
