New Economy Hans Dietrich von Loeffelholz,Roland Döhrn,Michael Rothgang,Klaus Löbke,Jochen Dehio,Rainer Graskamp,Waike Moos,2003-11-07 For many observers the beginning of a dynamic economic and stock market upswing in the U S in the mid 1990s marked the start of a new era the times of the new economy This phenomenon has been under intense discussion ever since both in the political arena as well as among scientists Thereby the somewhat glamorous term new economy reflects the conviction held by its proponents that the use of new technologies will lead to a never ending acceleration of technological progress and economic welfare The origins of this development date back a long time More than 30 years ago the starting point was the basic innovation digitization Production as well as application of information and communications technologies ICT are based on this principle At the beginning of the seventies the first microprocessor was produced Some ten years later the first personal computer was brought onto the market The commercial use of the Internet has begun in the mid nineties In view of the economic boom in the U S accompanying the introduction of the Internet the question arises as to what extent the new economy actually has exerted lasting positive effects on productivity not only in the United States but also worldwide Inspired by these developments the Federal Ministry of Economics and Technology commissioned RWI Essen to study the driving forces of the new economy In this report the trends of the ICT sector and of the use of ICT products are analyzed with respect to the overall economic effects in Germany in comparison to the U S Further analyses were carried out regarding the intensity and effects of e business Finally the influence of different methods of price measurement on productivity was analysed since this is important for international comparisons of total factor productivity The study culminates in a growth accounting calculation separating the contributions to economic growth by capital labor and technological progress

Cutcliffe, 1992 In this volume fifteen scholars from the United States Spain Puerto Rico and Colombia discuss the social implications of new technologies Their essays address the cultural worlds that crystallize around technologies the challenges to democracy that they pose and the responsibility of modern technology for forcing a public response to new social and moral issues Three themes define the three sections into which the volume is divided New Worlds New Technologies and New Issues The essays in the section New Worlds range from optimism that new technologies will produce a better world than that of 1992 through a nonjudgmental discussion of the transformation of our lifeworld that new technologies are effecting to deep concern for the viability of the world that modern technology has already created In New Technologies the focus is on political responses to modern technologies The authors in this section see the challenge to understanding and controlling our technological world in reshaping existing relations of social power and authority and in creating new institutions more adequate to the sociopolitical realities of the process of technological innovation While the contributors in the first two sections of the volume argue that broad changes in values and institutions are preconditions of a more beneficent relationship among people nature and technology those in the section New Issues adopt narrower more specific viewpoints Their essays address the political values underlying the Deep Ecology movement the ethics of military technologies the capacity of democratic institutions for a public role in setting technology policies and science and technology literacy mechanisms Collectively these essays reflect the growing international concern with the role played by technological innovation in a rapidly changing world and they point toward the formulation of concrete political platforms for informed social responses to the innovation process Strangers and Pilgrims Catherine A.
