New Approaches on Energy and the Environment

Richard D. Professor Morgenstern, Paul Professor Portney, 2010-09-30 Written by economists and policy analysts at Resources for the Future a Washington DC think tank with a tradition for independent objective research this collection of twenty five memos to the President offers constructive policy options for the elected administration on critical challenges related to energy the environment and natural resources Each contributor to New Approaches on Energy and the Environment was asked to address the question Based on your research and knowledge what policy recommendation would you like to make to the next U S president Writing in advance of the 2004 election so as to keep their essays free of partisan interpretations the authors were asked not to confine their suggestions to what the prevailing wisdom says is politically possible They also took pains to make their ideas accessible to a busy president as well as a wide range of readers interested in a concise and authoritative overview of the nation s energy and environmental policy choices The results are provocative sometimes controversial but highly readable essays on topics including climate change oil dependency electricity regulation brownfields revitalization forest service administration air and water quality and environmental health issues such as food safety and the growing threat of antibiotic resistance When the President takes office in January 2005 he will confront competing perspectives about the priorities and approaches that should apply to energy and environmental policy Americans want cleaner air and water and healthy and attractive surroundings but they also want inexpensive fuel comfortable cars and houses and continued economic growth New Approaches on Energy and the Environment provides thought provoking commonsense contributions to debates about important energy and environmental issues confronting the U S today

The Economics of Climate Change in China Fan Gang, Nicholas Stern, Ottmar Edenhofer, Xu Shanda, Klas Eklund, Frank Ackerman, Lailai Li, Karl Hallding, 2013-09-13 China faces many modernization challenges but perhaps none is more pressing than that posed by climate change China must find a new economic growth model that is simultaneously environmentally sustainable can free it from its dependency on fossil fuels and lift living standards for the majority of its population But what does such a model look like And how can China best make the transition from its present macro economic structure to a low carbon future This ground breaking economic study led by the Stockholm Environment Institute and the Chinese Economists 50 Forum brings together leading international thinkers in economics climate change and development to tackle some of the most challenging issues relating to China s low carbon development This study maps out a deep carbon reduction scenario and analyzes economic policies that shift carbon use and shows how China can take strong and decisive action to make deep reductions in carbon emission over the next forty years while maintaining high economic growth and minimizing adverse effects of a low carbon transition Moreover these reductions can be achieved within the finite global carbon budget for greenhouse gas emissions as determined by the hard constraints of climate science The authors make the compelling case that a transition to a low carbon economy is an essential part of China s development and modernization Such a transformation would also present opportunities for China to improve its energy security and move its economy higher up the international value chain They argue that even in these difficult economic times climate change action may present more opportunities than costs Such a transformation for China and the rest of the world will not be easy But it is possible necessary and worthwhile to pursue
