Economic Costs Of The Uninsured Implications For Business And Government:

The Economic Costs of the Uninsured Dallas L. Salisbury, 2000 Hidden Costs, Value Lost Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Care Services, Committee on the Consequences of Uninsurance, 2003-07-19 Hidden Cost Value Lost the fifth of a series of six books on the consequences of uninsurance in the United States illustrates some of the economic and social losses to the country of maintaining so many people without health insurance The book explores the potential economic and societal benefits that could be realized if everyone had health insurance on a continuous basis as people over age 65 currently do with Medicare Hidden Costs Value Lost concludes that the estimated benefits across society in health years of life gained by providing the uninsured with the kind and amount of health services that the insured use are likely greater than the additional social costs of doing so The potential economic value to be gained in better health outcomes from uninterrupted coverage for all Americans is estimated to be between 65 and 130 billion each year The ^AOxford Handbook of Personnel Assessment and Selection Neal Schmitt, 2013-12-15 The Oxford Handbook of Personnel Assessment and Selection distills the science and practice of employee selection Now in paperback this volume includes essential information about the validation process individual difference constructs and measures and performance outcomes and measures and will be a comprehensive and authoritative reference and training tool in the field A Shared Destiny Institute of Medicine, Board on Health Care Services, Committee on the Consequences of Uninsurance, 2003-04-05 A Shared Destiny is the fourth in a series of six reports on the problems of uninsurance in the United States This report examines how the quality quantity and scope of community health services can be adversely affected by having a large or growing uninsured population It explores the overlapping financial and organizational basis of health services delivery to uninsured and insured populations the effects of community uninsurance on access to health care locally and the potential spillover effects on a community s economy and the health of its citizens The committee believes it is both mistaken and dangerous to assume that the persistence of a sizable uninsured population in the United States harms only those who are uninsured

Subcommittee on Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies, 2003 Source Book on Collective Bargaining , 2008 Benefits Quarterly , 2001 Health Affairs , 2004 Directory of Published Proceedings , 2004 Annual Report - Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, 2001

The Economic Costs of the Uninsured Stephen Blakely, 2001 This article highlights the May 3 2000 policy forum on The Economic Costs of the Uninsured sponsored by Employee Benefit Research Institute Education and Research Fund EBRI ERF Attended by about a hundred invited experts the policy forum examined the research that has been done connecting health insurance status to the performance of the economy and the implications for consumers business and government Most Americans have health insurance protection but for more than a decade the proportion of nonelderly Americans without health insurance has been steadily creeping up Today some 44 million people in the United States 18.4 percent of those under 65 do not have insurance coverage to pay for their health care But it is widely recognized that people without health insurance still receive health care The uninsured are not staying out of the health care system rather they are receiving higher cost medical care through emergency room visits and they are forcing others to pay for their health care Economists say these costs are picked up in various ways by businesses and their employees in the form of higher premiums for their insurance by workers in the form of taxes and by all Americans in the form of an opportunity cost in lost value to the U S economy Employers in both the private and public sectors are the dominant source of health insurance for nonelderly individuals in the United States providing coverage for nearly two thirds of this under age 65 population in 1998 But increasingly the uninsured are being viewed as a challenge to and criticism of the employment based health care system in this country not just because the ranks of the uninsured are growing but also because roughly 85 percent of the 44 million uninsured Americans are in a family with a working adult As a result many critics see the employment based health insurance system as a failure and are calling for it to be replaced with an individual based system However even an individual based system would not change the reality that health insurance in the United States is voluntary Employers are not legally required to provide coverage to their workers and individuals are not legally required to maintain coverage In this kind of system some segments of the working population will have coverage while others will not In addition it is often overlooked that there are effectively two employment based health insurance systems one for small employers where coverage rates are low and one for large employers where coverage rates are high Mandated solutions are not as simple as they might seem as indicated by experience in the states concerning noncompliance with income tax driver's license registration or automobile insurance The PDF for the above title published in the August 2000 issue of EBRI Notes also contains the fulltext of another August 2000 EBRI Notes article abstracted on SSRN Recent Evidence on Pension Coverage and Sponsorship by Employer Size and Industry
