Rationalizing Rural Area Classifications for the Economic Research Service National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine,Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education,Committee on National Statistics,2016-01-05 The U S Department of Agriculture Economic Research Service USDA ERS maintains four highly related but distinct geographic classification systems to designate areas by the degree to which they are rural The original urban rural code scheme was developed by the ERS in the 1970s Rural America today is very different from the rural America of 1970 described in the first rural classification report At that time migration to cities and poverty among the people left behind was a central concern The more rural a residence the more likely a person was to live in poverty and this relationship held true regardless of age or race Since the 1970s the interstate highway system was completed and broadband was developed Services have become more consolidated into larger centers Some of the traditional rural industries farming and mining have prospered and there has been rural amenity based in migration Many major structural and economic changes have occurred during this period These factors have resulted in a quite different rural economy and society since 1970 In April 2015 the Committee on National Statistics convened a workshop to explore the data estimation and policy issues for rationalizing the multiple classifications of rural areas currently in use by the Economic Research Service ERS Participants aimed to help ERS make decisions regarding the generation of a county rural urban scale for public use taking into consideration the changed social and economic environment This report summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop Tramps & Trade Union Travelers Kim Moody,2019-08-13 From the author of On New Terrain a historical examination of why American workers never organized in early industrial America and what it means today Why has there been no viable independent labor party in the United States Many people assert American exceptionalist arguments which state a lack of class consciousness and union tradition among American workers is to blame While the racial ethnic and gender divisions within the American working class have created organizational challenges for the working class Moody uses archival research to argue that despite their divisions workers of all ethnic and racial groups in the Gilded Age often displayed high levels of class consciousness and political radicalism In place of American exceptionalism Moody contends that high levels of internal migration during the late 1800s created instability in the union and political organizations of workers Because of the tumultuous conditions brought on by the uneven industrialization of early American capitalism millions of workers became migrants moving from state to state and city to city The organizational weakness that resulted undermined efforts by American workers to build independent labor based parties in the 1880s and 1890s Using detailed research and primary sources Moody traces how it was that pure and simple unionism would triumph by the end of the century despite the existence of a significant socialist minority in organized labor at that time Terrific An entirely original take on why American labor was virtually unique in failing to build its own political party But there s much more in investigating labor migration and the tramp phenomenon in the Gilded Age he discovers fascinating parallels with today s struggles of immigrant workers Mike Davis author of Prisoners of the American Dream British Education Index ,2005

Equal in Law, Unequal in Fact Timo Makkonen,2012-01-06 An intriguing paradox characterises international and European action against discrimination On the one hand equality and the right to non discrimination are key human rights and protected by an impressive line of legal documents On the other hand empirical studies show that discrimination is still rampant today This book maps the gap between the rights and the reality and examines the causes consequences and extent of discrimination in Europe today as well as the international and European legal response to it On the basis of this analysis the study explains why anti discrimination law fails to deliver and what can be done about it The result is of interest to scholars students civil society politicians and anyone interested in equality and making it a reality Agricultural Outlook

,1986 Cumulative Index to Foreign Production and Commercial Reports ,1972 Family Law Services Handbook
