The Birth of a Celestial Light Tina Eftekhari, 2015-01-12 It is interesting that women who campaign for women's rights and interests in Iran have not considered engaging with women who are neither conventional Muslims nor strongly secular but instead explore other aspects of religion and spirituality The women examined in this study identify themselves as believers in God but have different views of religion some wish to be called religious but do not follow the official Islamic Shia and have their own interpretation of what it means to be a good Muslim while some think of spirituality as their religion and refer to themselves as spiritual. Scholarship on women in Iran has not yet taken such an approach and has not considered women's interests in spirituality with regard to religion. As such, this book differs greatly from existing work on Iranian women's lives after the Islamic revolution. It examines the potential feminist implications of women's involvement in one of the most popular spiritual movements, Inter universal Mysticism, and its emancipatory potential for women. The central argument here is that feminist spirituality is an expression of women's power to identify, explore, and assess their own spiritual experiences in order to construct their own sense of self and transform their lives. As such, this book broadens discourses about women in Iran by examining the link between spirituality, coping, and meaning-making in the lives of women involved with Inter universal Mysticism. The study's unique contribution is not simply that it extends the range of contexts in which gender can be analysed, but rather that it, through the lens of feminism, demonstrates the significance of women's choice of spirituality as an investigative issue which can elucidate women's wider social, cultural, and political processes in contemporary Iran.

Transforming Gender and Food Security in the Global South Jemimah Njuki, John Parkins, Amy Kaler, 2016-11-25. Drawing on studies from Africa, Asia, and South America, this book provides empirical evidence and conceptual explorations of the gendered dimensions of food security. It investigates how food security and gender inequity are conceptualized within interventions, assesses the impacts and outcomes of gender-responsive programs on food security and gender equity, and addresses diverse approaches to gender research and practice that range from descriptive and analytical to strategic and transformative. The chapters draw on diverse theoretical perspectives, including transformative learning, feminist theory, deliberative democracy, and technology adoption. As a result, they add important conceptual and empirical material to a growing literature on the challenges of gender equity in agricultural production. A unique feature of this book is the integration of both analytic and transformative approaches to understanding gender and food security. The analytic material shows how food security interventions enable women and men to meet the long-term nutritional needs of their households and to enhance their economic position. The transformative chapters also document efforts to build durable and equitable relationships between men and women, addressing underlying social, cultural, and economic causes of gender inequality. Taken together, these combined approaches enable women and men to reflect on gendered divisions of labor and resources related to food and to reshape these divisions in ways which benefit families and communities. The Entrepreneurial Self Ulrich Bröckling,2015-11-09 This is a book about who we are today and how we have become who we are It is about the engineers of the modern soul the entrepreneurial self It is essential reading for all those who care about the incessant demands placed on us to become more than we are to become entrepreneurs of our selves to maximise and optimise our capacities in ways that align personal identity and political responsibility Professor Peter Miller London School of Economics Political Science Ulrich Bröckling claims that the imperative to act like an entrepreneur has turned ubiquitous In Western society there is a drive to orient your thinking and behaviour on the objective of market success which dictates the private and professional spheres Life is now ruled by competition for power money fitness and youth The self is driven to constantly improve change and adapt to a society only capable of producing winners and losers The Entrepreneurial Self explores the series of juxtapositions within the self created by this call for entrepreneurship

Whereas it can expose unknown potential it also leads to over challenging It may strengthen self confidence but it also exacerbates the feeling of powerlessness It may set free creativity but it also generates unbounded anger Competition is driven by the promise that only the capable will reap success but no amount of effort can remove the risk of failure The individual has no choice but to balance out the contradiction between the hope of rising and the fear of decline Ulrich Brckling is Professor of Cultural Sociology at the Albert Ludwigs University Freiburg Germany
