The Description of a New World, Called the Blazing-World Margaret Cavendish Newcastle,2020-03-06 The Description of a New World Called The Blazing World better known as The Blazing World is a 1666 work of prose fiction by the English writer Margaret Cavendish the Duchess of Newcastle Feminist critic Dale Spender calls it a forerunner of science fiction It can also be read as a utopian work As its full title suggests Blazing World is a fanciful depiction of a satirical utopian kingdom in another world with different stars in the sky that can be reached via the North Pole It is the only known work of utopian fiction by a woman in the 17th century as well as an example of what we now call proto science fiction although it is also a romance an adventure story and even autobiography A young woman enters this other world becomes the empress of a society composed of various species of talking animals and organizes an invasion back into her world complete with submarines towed by the fish men and the dropping of fire stones by the bird men to confound the enemies of her homeland the Kingdom of Esfi

Medieval Saints' Lives Emma Campbell,2008 The significance of Old French hagiography in current theoretical debates in medieval studies and the humanities Contending that the study of hagiography is significant both for a consideration of medieval literature and for current theoretical debates in medieval studies this book considers a range of Old French and Anglo Norman texts using modern theories of kinship and community to show how saints lives construe social and sexual relations Focusing on the depiction of the gift kinship and community the book maintains that social and sexual systems play a keyrole in vernacular hagiography Such systems along with the desires they produce and control are it is argued central to hagiography s religious functions particularly its role as a vehicle of community formation. In attempting to think beyond the limits of human relationships, saints' lives nonetheless create an environment in which queer desires and modes of connection become possible, suggesting that in this case at least the orthodox nurtures the queer. This book thus suggests not only that medieval hagiography is worthy of greater attention but also that this corpus might provide an important resource for theorizing community in its medieval contexts and for thinking it in the present.

EMMA CAMPBELL is Associate Professor of French at the University of Warwick.
