Tucker, 2007-06-25 In Mind from Body Don Tucker one of the most original thinkers about organic information processing provides a fascinating analysis of how our brains have become what they are today and speculates intriguingly about what they could be tomorrow He presents important research that explains how personal experience creates the emotional and motivational bases of each of our thoughts even though we are usually not aware that it is happening Tucker shows that in exploring how these bodily thought processes still determine how we react to the world and make decisions we can become more rational     Motivation, Emotion, and Cognition David Yun Dai, Robert J. Sternberg, 2004-07-13 The central argument of this book is that cognition is not the whole story in understanding intellectual functioning and development To account for inter individual intra individual and developmental variability in actual intellectual performance it is necessary to treat cognition emotion and motivation as inextricably related Motivation Emotion and Cognition Integrative Perspectives on Intellectual Functioning and Development represents a new direction in theory and research on intellectual functioning and development portrays human intelligence as fundamentally constrained by biology and adaptive needs but modulated by social and cultural forces and encompasses and integrates a broad range of scientific findings and advances from cognitive and affective neurosciences to cultural psychology addressing fundamental issues of individual differences developmental variability and cross cultural differences with respect to intellectual functioning and development By presenting current knowledge regarding integrated understanding of intellectual functioning and development this volume promotes exchanges among researchers concerned with provoking new ideas for research and provides educators and other practitioners with a framework that will enrich understanding and guide practice     Cognition and Neural Development Don Tucker, Phan Luu, 2012-11-08 Cognition is not just shaped by neural development It is neural development in action This book aims to demonstrate that cognition is the process of differentiating neural connections to refine cerebral architecture to match the properties of experience Understanding the roots of this process in neuroembryology may suggest new insights into the evolutionary developmental basis of human psychological function     Regression Periods in Human infancy Mikael Heimann, Frans X. Plooij, 2003-10-17 Regression periods play a central role in the psychological development of the human baby Studies of infants have identified 10 periods of regression or a return to a high frequency of mother infant contact within the first 20 months of life These periods of emotional insecurity in the child signal forthcoming periods of developmental advance and the emergence of an array of new skills as a consequence of parent infant conflict over body contact and the renegotiation of old privileges Although the basic idea in this book is an old one the authors believe that regression periods deserve further study and have identified four questions of central importance today Can the phenomenon of regression periods as found by Dutch researchers in 1992 be replicated in other countries and cultures What environmental conditions have an effect on these regression periods and how Are there physical conditions in infants that show a non linear distribution over age similar to regression periods Have brain changes been detected since the review of Fischer Rose 1994 at other ages than the six reported by them and if yes how do these relate to the ages at which regression periods are found Forming the core of this book the replication studies performed in Sweden Spain and England provide support that regression periods are a reliable phenomenon and should be dealt with accordingly whenever developmental processes in infancy are discussed
