4.7.1 Arteries in the Superior Mediastinum

As the aorta emerges from the pericardial sac, it begins to arch posteriorly and to the left (Fig. 4.11). At the level of the T4 vertebra, the aorta has become vertical again, descending through the posterior mediastinum. The aortic arch passes over the right pulmonary artery and ends by passing posterior to the left pulmonary artery. The trachea and esophagus pass posterior and to the right of the aortic arch. The arch of the aorta gives off the major arteries that supply blood to the head and to the upper extremity. This branching is asymmetrical. The first (from the right) and most anterior branch from the aorta is the brachiocephalic trunk. This arterial trunk bends toward the right as it ascends, and as it reaches the upper limit of the superior mediastinum, it bifurcates into the right common carotid and right subclavian arteries. The next two branches from the aortic arch are the left common carotid and the left subclavian arteries. These two arteries ascend almost vertically to the left of the trachea. The common carotid arteries will supply the majority of the blood to the head and neck. The subclavian arteries continue as the axillary and brachial arteries and supply the upper extremity. The arch of the aorta and its branches make contact with the upper lobe of the right lung, and their impressions are normally seen on the fixed lung after removal. Neither the brachiocephalic trunk, left common carotid, nor the left subclavian gives off consistent branches in the superior mediastinum. However, the subclavian arteries at the root of the neck give off the internal thoracic arteries which reenter the superior mediastinum and descend along each side of the sternum. On occasion there will be an artery branching from either the aortic arch, the right common carotid, or one of the subclavian arteries, and supplying the thyroid gland in the midline. This variant artery is called a thyroid ima. Since this artery is often found crossing the region where a tracheostomy is performed, it is important to remember that this artery is present in ~10 % of individuals.

4.7.2 Brachiocephalic Veins

The bilateral brachiocephalic veins are formed by the merging of the internal jugular vein and the subclavian vein on both sides at the base of the neck (Figs. 4.10 and 4.11). The right brachiocephalic vein descends nearly vertically, while the left crosses obliquely behind the manubrium to join the right and form the superior vena cava. The superior vena cava continues inferiorly into the pericardial sac. The brachiocephalic veins run anteriorly in the superior mediastinum. The left brachiocephalic vein passes anterior to the three branches of the aortic arch and is separated from the manubrium only by the thymus gland (Fig. 4.10). The brachiocephalic veins receive blood from the internal thoracic veins, the inferior thyroid veins, and the small pericardiophrenic veins. They also receive blood from the superior intercostal veins from behind.

4.7.3 The Trachea and Esophagus

The trachea is a largely cartilaginous tube that runs from the larynx inferiorly through the superior mediastinum and ends by branching into the main bronchi (Fig. 4.11). It serves as a
