Hands Can Say Hello:

Dialogue of Touch Viola A. Brody, 1997-06-01 Touch is essential for life and what Viola Brody calls capable touching is the core of developmental play therapy building both the self of the hurt child and his or her appreciation of the nurturing other. It thus makes way for dialogue between them and as the dialogue becomes an organizing force for the child's behaving and relating facilitates healing and maturation. In recognition of the crucial importance of knowing how to be present with a child in a reparative role Dr Brody incorporates training in developmental play into the body of her book to provide therapists, teachers and other helping professionals with the experience they need to understand and practice capable touching.

Brain Games for Your Child Robert Fisher, 2011-09-01 Every child needs love and physical care but also play that stimulates their thinking and helps boost their brain power. By playing with parents, grandparents and carers, children can build their social and creative skills and get the mental stimulus that develops their brains. In Brain Games for Your Child, Robert Fisher draws on his thirty years of research into children's thinking and learning to provide over 200 games to help children to build their thinking, number, language and social skills. From music and art games, treasure hunts and card games, word games and number battles, there are games that can be played by all the family that will create bonds and build memories and help boost your child's brain power. Included are old favourites as well as new games but what is common to all the games is interaction with other people rather than with electronic screens where communicating and playing with others provides the basis for developing the full range of a child's abilities. Brain Games for Your Child provides games to create a happy learning environment encouraging educational skills through games that are fun. It provides a wealth of games to play with children of all abilities during the all important first 10 years of life. This is an essential guide for raising a happier, brighter and more sociable child.

Learning Our Body with Bun Bun Donna Eastin Garrison, Early childhood discovery occurs every day for your child. As they explore and discover through experiences, they become more confident, alert and agile in their movements. As parents, you provide opportunities for your child to use appropriate vocabulary and language to develop social and body awareness. Support and instill fitness within your child's natural movements. Provide a mix of structured and unstructured gross and fine motor activities for your child each day. For example, dance, tumbling or playing games as kicking and throwing balls with rules are some ideas of structured activities. Unstructured activities consist of your child just simply running around and exploring in the yard. Teaching and supporting your child to have an active lifestyle not only benefits their current health and growth but also promotes healthy lifestyle patterns in their future. I encourage you to teach your child how to care for and respect their bodies. This is an essential part of their cognitive and social/emotional development. Provide appropriate vocabulary to assist and promote your child as they are developing self-care such as toileting, bathing, washing hands and/or blowing their nose. Naturally, our bodies are meant to move. Intentionally teach your child about their body with Learning Our Body with Bun Bun.
