

Russian literature has always been focused on describing people's deep feelings and emotions linked to particular events. Trying to make readers understand all peculiarities and nuances, the authors described the smallest details of the setting and motifs influencing the main characters. At the same time, much attention was given to heroes' mentalities and culture, as issues differentiating them from others and impacting their thoughts and feelings. For this reason, the various authors compared Russians with Europeans and other nationalities to emphasize the difference and convey the main message. For instance, the novel "The Gambler" by Dostoevsky is one of the works including a depiction of Europe and Russia. Resting on his own experience, the author uses the plot to show the difference and attract attention to it.

The story revolves around a young man, Alexei Ivanovich, who falls in love and views gambling as a way to become rich and marry a woman he loves. Alexei lives in a gambling spa in Roulettenberg and works as a tutor for Russian General, who has a stepdaughter Polina Alexandrovna. The main character loves her and wants to help his beloved one to pay off her father's debts. There are also several foreign characters, Monsieur le Comte, Mile Blanche, and Mr. Astley, who also help to understand the setting better. The idea to get money from the wealthy Granny fails, and Alexei tries to win money through gambling but fails to save his love. As a result, Alexei wins a big sum and offers it to Polina, but a proud girl refuses and leaves.

In such a way, gambling becomes the central theme of the novel. It influences all events and main characters' motifs as they play, hoping to win money. However, it is only the first and the most visible layer of the story, while Dostoyevsky adds some additional and more meaningful messages and ideas. The main events occur in Europe and involve Russian people, meaning that the choice of the background helps to reveal their nature and attain a better understanding. The author achieves the goal by depicting Europe and Europeans and comparing them to Russian people. This contrast promotes an enhanced vision of the novel and its analysis.

Dostoevsky pays much attention to depicting Europeans in the story. For instance, Alexei Ivanovich, as the main character, often cogitates about foreign

Essays in Russian Literature; the Conservative View: Leontiev, Rozanov, Shestov КОНСТАНТИН ЛЕОНТЬЕВ, 1968 Essays in Russian Literature Spencer E. Roberts, Mikhail Bakhtin Gary Saul Morson, Caryl Emerson, 1990 Books about thinkers require a kind of unity that their thought may not possess This cautionary statement is especially applicable to Mikhail Bakhtin whose intellectual development displays a diversity of insights that cannot be easily integrated or accurately described in terms of a single overriding concern Indeed in a career spanning some sixty years he experienced both dramatic and gradual changes in his thinking returned to abandoned insights that he then developed in unexpected ways and worked through new ideas only loosely related to his earlier concerns Small wonder then that Bakhtin should have speculated on the relations among received notions of biography unity innovation and the creative process Unity with respect not only to individuals but also to art culture and the world generally is usually understood as conformity to an underlying structure or an overarching scheme Bakhtin believed that this idea of unity contradicts the possibility of true creativity For if everything conforms to a preexisting pattern then genuine development is reduced to mere discovery to a mere uncovering of something that in a strong sense is already there And yet Bakhtin accepted that some concept of unity was essential Without it the world ceases to make sense and creativity again disappears this time replaced by the purely aleatory There would again be no possibility of anything meaningfully new The grim truth of these two extremes was expressed well by Borges an inescapable labyrinth could consist of an infinite number of turns or of no turns at all Bakhtin attempted to rethink the concept of unity in order to allow for the possibility of genuine creativity The goal in his words was a nonmonologic unity in which real change or surprisingness is an essential component of the creative process As it happens such change was characteristic of Bakhtin's own thought which seems to have developed by continually diverging from his initial intentions Although it would not necessarily follow that the development of Bakhtin's thought corresponded to his ideas about unity and creativity we believe that in this case his ideas on nonmonologic unity are useful in understanding his own thought as well as that of other thinkers whose careers are comparably varied and productive Essays in Russian Literature Spencer E.
