

Sources and Records. The Foundations of our Knowledge

Ferdinand Opll

The work of historians is based on the survey and analysis of the records available for the period under scrutiny, the examination of the relevant secondary literature and detailed reflection regarding possible approaches and methods. Without knowledge of the sources, the material available lacks any underpinning. In the following survey of the textual records for the history of Vienna in the Middle Ages, we shall not only deal with narrative sources, the historiography, but will also consider the domain of charters and official documents.¹

Historiographical evidence, including autobiographical literature, is, on one hand, especially attractive, because of the more detailed descriptions it contains, even if, on the other hand, it is not infrequently marked by the attitudes of its authors, which can make it tendentious and biased. Particularly when dealing with the history of a medieval city, we should take care to establish whether the relevant historiography represents an insider's view, i.e. of a person living in the city itself or in a close relationship to it, or whether it originates with a foreigner, a stranger and thus offers an outsider's view. Furthermore, the concept of a civic historiography needs especially careful treatment, for annals originating with religious writers within the city do not necessarily present an urban view of events. It is after all important that, in the vast majority of cases, the names of the records (e.g. Annales Vindobonenses) are never

¹ Pictorial sources from early cartography and vistas are discussed in this volume: Opll, "The heritage of maps". For architecture and material culture see Schedl, "Architectonic articulation", and Opačič, "Urban art", in this volume. —This article was completed in spring 2017.

1 An Inquiry into the Understanding pleasant and useful Since it is the UNDERSTANDING that sets man above the rest of sensible beings and gives him all the advantage and dominion which he has over them it is certainly a subject even for its nobleness worth our labour to inquire into The understanding like the eye whilst it makes us see and perceive all other things takes no notice of itself and it requires and art and pains to set it at a distance and make it its own object But whatever be the difficulties that lie in the way of this inquiry whatever it be that keeps us so much in the dark to ourselves sure I am that all the light we can let in upon our minds all the acquaintance we can make with our own understandings will not only be very pleasant but bring us great advantage in directing our thoughts in the search of other things

2 Design This therefore being my purpose to inquire into the original certainty and extent of HUMAN KNOWLEDGE together with the grounds and degrees of BELIEF OPINION and ASSENT I shall not at present meddle with the physical consideration of the mind or trouble myself to examine wherein its essence consists or by what motions of our spirits or alterations of our bodies we come to have any SENSATION by our organs or any IDEAS in our understandings and whether those ideas do in their formation any or all of them depend on matter or not These are speculations which however curious and entertaining I shall decline as lying out of my way in the design I am now upon It shall suffice to my present purpose to consider the discerning faculties of a man as they are employed about the objects which they have to do with And I shall imagine I have not wholly misemployed myself in the thoughts I shall have on this occasion if in this historical plain method I can give any account of the ways whereby our understandings come to attain those notions of things we have and can set down any measures of the certainty of our knowledge or the grounds of those persuasions which are to be found amongst men so various different and wholly contradictory and yet asserted somewhere or other with such assurance and confidence that he that shall take a view of the opinions of mankind observe their opposition and at the same time consider the fondness and devotion wherewith they are embraced the resolution and eagerness wherewith they are maintained may perhaps have reason to suspect that either there is no such thing as truth at all or that mankind hath no sufficient means to attain a certain knowledge of it

Propositions, Functions, and Analysis Peter Hylton, 2005-09-22 The work of Bertrand Russell had a decisive influence on the emergence of analytic philosophy and on its subsequent development The essays collected in this volume by one of the leading authorities on Russell's philosophy all aim at recapturing and articulating aspects of Russell's philosophical vision during his most influential and important period the two decades following his break with Idealism in 1899 One theme of the collection concerns Russell's views about propositions and their analysis and the relation of those ideas to his rejection of Idealism Another theme is the development of Russell's logicism culminating in Whitehead's and Russell's Principia Mathematica and Hylton offers a revealing view of the conception of logic which underlies it Here again there is an emphasis on Russell's argument against Idealism on the idea that his logicism was a crucial part of that argument A further focus of the volume is Russell's views about functions and propositional functions This theme is part of a contrast that Hylton draws between Russell's general philosophical position and that of Frege in particular there is a close parallel with the quite different views that the two philosophers held about the nature of philosophical analysis Hylton also sheds valuable light on the much disputed idea of an operation which Wittgenstein advances in the Tractatus Logico Philosophicus The Works of John Locke Locke,1740 Bertrand Russell and the Origins of the Set-theoretic 'Paradoxes' GARCIADIEGO,2013-03-09 XII
