18th Century Literature

The 18th century is a period of great literary works. The styles are different throughout the period, but the unity of the work is still present.

Much of this period focused on public and general themes, until the Pre-Romantic era when literary works began to focus upon personal expression. 18th century literature can be broken down into three main parts: the Restoration, the Age of Pope, and Pre-Romantics.

This literary time period also included works from John Dryden, who used elegance and cleverness in his writings. This period ended about 1700, and enabled a new age of literature.

In literary history, the first half of the 18th century is known as the Age of the Pope. In this age, the writers expressed views of the public and restrained from writing personal topics or expressions. In the Age of the Pope or the Neoclassical Age, most of the literary themes were of social, political, and moral life. The Rape of the Lock and Epigrams by Alexander Pope, and "A

Most of the literary works in this period used satirical styles to express a concern in society. "Puffs, powders, patches, Bibles, billet-doux", from The Rape of the Lock shows an example of pathos a satirical device used in this age of literature. Jonathan Swift also uses satire in Gulliver's Travels to mock the Parliament, and in "Modest Proposal" he writes about eating children as a solution to a socioeconomic problem. After the writings, literature began to focus on private expressions rather than public thoughts and emotions.

The Age of Johnson or the Pre-romantic era was shown in various ways. Characteristics of the age included ballads, a new taste for ruins, Gothic castles

The Cambridge History of Literary Criticism: Volume 4, The Eighteenth Century H. B. Nisbet, Claude Rawson, 2005-12-08 This is a comprehensive 1997 account of the history of literary criticism in Britain and Europe between 1660 and 1800 Unlike previous histories it is not just a chronological survey of critical writing but a multidisciplinary investigation of how the understanding of literature and its various genres was transformed at the start of the modern era by developments in philosophy psychology the natural sciences linguistics and other disciplines as well as in society at large In the process modern literary theory at first often implicit in literary texts themselves emancipated itself from classical poetics and rhetoric and literary criticism emerged as a full time professional activity catering for an expanding literate public The volume is international both in coverage and in authorship Extensive bibliographies provide guidance for further specialised study

Willison, 1971-07-02 More than fifty specialists have contributed to this new edition of volume 2 of The Cambridge Bibliography of English Literature The design of the original work has established itself so firmly as a workable solution to the immense problems of analysis articulation and coordination that it has been retained in all its essentials for the new edition The task of the new contributors has been to revise and integrate the lists of 1940 and 1957 to add materials of the following decade to correct and refine the bibliographical details already available and to re shape the whole according to a new series of conventions devised to give greater clarity and consistency to the entries Essays in Eighteenth-century History Rosalind Mitchison,1966 Literary Anecdotes of the Eighteenth Century: Essays and illustrations [including: History of lexicons, and anecdotes of eminent lexicographers; Memoirs of eminent antiquaries, friends and patrons of Mr. Bowyer] John Nichols,1812 Essays in Biography, 1680-1726 Bonamy Dobrée,1925 Essays in Biography Carl Rollyson,2005 Essays in Biography is a play on words conveying Carl Rollyson's attempt to explore the nature of biography in pieces about the history of the genre and in portrayals of biographers Plutarch Leon Edel and W A Swanberg literary figures Lillian Hellman Jack London philosophers and critics Leo Strauss and Hippolyte Taine political figures Winston Churchill and Napoleon and artists Rembrandt and Rubens An essay in biography Rollyson argues is an effort to comprehend a life that is inherently incomplete and subject to revision Many of the facts about a biographical subject's life that are blandly presented in reference books have been discovered by biographers at great cost to their reputations With the history of biography as a censored genre in mind he encourages readers of biography to look critically at the biographies they read no matter whether those biographies are book length narratives or short encyclopedia entries Many of the pairings in Essays in Biography are meant to evoke Plutarch's presentation of parallel lives The biographical essay Rollyson concludes is a unique form of knowledge one that modern critics have devalued by trying to separate the creator from his creation A History of England in the Eighteenth Century William Edward Hartpole Lecky,1891 The Cambridge History of Science: Volume 4, Eighteenth-Century Science David C. Century as a Category of Asian History Leonard Blussé, Femme S Gaastra, 2016-12-05 The starting point of this volume is the scathing attack far reaching in its consequences launched in 1942 by J C van Leur on the views then current on the character and significance of the 18th century as a category in Asian history His denial of European pre eminence in Asian waters represented a direct attack on colonial historiography The essays here derive from an international conference held 50 years later to assess the impact of van Leur s work In part historiographic in part drawing on new research they aim to delimit the boundaries of European Asian interaction and to provide case studies of what this period actually meant for the history of South and East Asia
